

Uniformed Police Stood By While Lincolmites Gambled

By GORDON WINTERS

While uniformed police officers stood by, dice tumbled on crap tables, men played cards and $100 bills changed hands at the Lincoln Country Club, a former employe testified Thursday.

At the Elks Club a roulette wheel spun, dice fell at crap tables and men played at cards and laid out $5 and $10 bills, a former employe testified.

The testimony came in U.S. District Court as attorneys for a Lincoln businessman attempted to show that gambling laws have been unfairly enforced in Lincoln.

John Long, owner of the Golden Cue-Checkmate Club, contends that authorities forced him in 1973 to close down a private club he had formed where, for 75 cents per hour, men could play poker and other games for money.

Damages Sought

At the same time, Long contends, authorities were not enforcing the law at other private clubs. He is seeking $115,000 in damages on the grounds that his constitutional right to equal protection of the law has been violated.

Testimony on games at the Country Club came from James Clark, a first-year law student in Chicago, who worked as a bartender at the club from the summer of 1972 to September 1975.

Questioned on the summers of 1972 and 1973 Clark said that crap tables were set up at the Country Club during the annual Swingfest Stag in June and about every other week at Iron Derby Stags.

"They would take regular tables and put boxes without bottoms on them to contain the dice," Clark told the jury. "I've seen $50's and $100's" on the dice tables, he said.

During the Swingfest Stag, Clark said, about 150 to 200 men would be in the country club, playing dice or playing gin and pitch with money on the table.

At the same time officers were in the same room with the crap tables and card games, Clark said. They wore badges and uniforms with "big yellow patches that said Lincoln police," he testified.

Testimony on games at the Elks Club came from Mrs. Kay Winthrop, now a secretary at the Penal Complex, who worked part-time as a cocktail waitress at the Elks Club.

During the summer of 1973, Mrs. Winthrop testified, she served drinks at a stag on the third floor of the club.

Roulette Wheel

She said she saw a roulette wheel spinning, heard numbers being called and saw money on the table. Men were playing cards and shooting dice at crap tables, she said.

Mrs. Winthrop said she saw chips at the card tables where men were playing, but, not being familiar with card games, did not identify them as poker chips until later. "I thought they looked like tiddlywinks," she said.

Earlier in the day, Long's attorneys, Herbert Friedman and John Stevens Berry, had called to the witness stand the exalted ruler of the Elks Lodge in 1973, Donald Betts, and the president of the Country Club in 1973, Don S. Bergquist.

Knowledge Denied

Both men denied having any first-hand knowledge of gambling at their clubs, also testifying they had not attended stags at their clubs during 1973.

Named as defendants in the suit are Joseph T. Carroll, retired Lincoln police chief, and former Lancaster County Attorney Paul Douglas, who is now state attorney general.

As the trial began, defense attorney Bob Gibson admonished the jury to pay attention to what was not proved during the trial, predicting that Long's attorneys would not be able to prove that Carroll or Douglas had any personal knowledge of gambling violations which they ignored.

Friedman said he picked the two clubs because Carroll and Douglas belonged to both. Later testimony indicated Douglas did not belong to the Country Club.

Carroll was still on the witness stand late Thursday afternoon as the trial recessed for the day.

No Complaints

Carroll said he did not know the Elks Club and Country Club permitted gambling and that the department never received complaints about gambling there.

Carroll also said, however, that he suspected there was gambling at the Elks Club and all of them.

"In all honesty, I'm not so naive as to think there's not gambling in Lincoln and any other city," Carroll said.

NORAD Can Retaliate

Washington (UPI) — Retired Vice Adm. Gerald Miller said Thursday the commander of the North American Air Defense Command is authorized to fire nuclear-tipped antiaircraft weapons against a wartime Soviet bomber attack without specific presidential clearance.

But he said he understood "action is underway in the Defense Department to revoke this authorization in the near future."

Miller, who retired in 1974 as deputy director of the joint strategic target planning staff, said the delegation of authority was made at a time when the United States was deeply concerned about bomber attacks.

"The delegation has outlived its usefulness in defending against an attack," he told newsmen attending his testimony before a House subcommittee on international security affairs.

He said the special delegation of power to the NORAD commander had been disclosed before by Gen. Earl Partridge in 1964, when he commanded NORAD.

'First Use' Opposed

Miller testified before the House subcommittee on international security and scientific affairs, which is considering drafting a resolution opposing the first use of nuclear weapons by the United States.

Miller said authority to launch major nuclear warfare rests "firmly in the hands of the civilian hierarchy" — with the sole exception of the NORAD commander.

"The nuclear systems he controls are low in yield, purely defensive in nature, and would be used over friendly territory or open seas," Miller said.

"Weapons he might launch would be in response to a threat of 'first use' by the opposition (the Soviet Union) and under actual war conditions."

While Miller, in his prepared testimony, did not identify the systems the NORAD commander controls, they are apparently six squadrons of F106A interceptors which can carry nuclear-tipped "Genie" air-to-air rocket, or "Falcon" air-to-air missiles with conventional warheads.

U.S.-Canadian Command

NORAD is a combined U.S.-Canadian defense command located at Colorado Springs, Colo. The current commander is Gen. Daniel "Cappy" James, one of the highest ranking black officers in the U.S. Air Force.

"In earlier days of nuclear weapons," Miller said, "I can recall discussions about situations where an isolated commander, cut off from other units, out of communication with higher authority, facing annihilation, and knowing that a nuclear exchange was taking place, might feel justified in using nuclear weapons without receiving authority from higher levels."

"However, as our nuclear capability increased and pressure for more civilian control of the military developed, procedures, devices, and education have all been brought together to produce circumstances where it would be virtually impossible for a military commander to use the weapons in his command without presidential release authority."

"Release authority is firmly in the hands of the civilian authority."

Miller said that if a president should die suddenly, the authority to use nuclear weapons would move to the next legally installed president and would not flow to military commanders.

He opposed the draft resolution barring the United States from first use of nuclear weapons, saying such a restriction "would invite mischief" on the part of the Soviet Union and hobble U.S. military response in a nuclear confrontation.

Jury Panel Hears Final Arguments

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst's prosecutor portrayed her Thursday as a liar who should be convicted of bank robbery while the lawyer defending the young heiress implored her jury to view her participation in the crime as a matter of survival.

F. Lee Bailey, in a surprisingly brief closing argument for the defense in the eight-week trial, told the jury: "This is not a case about bank robbery. . . . It is a case about dying or surviving. That is all that Patricia Campbell Hearst thought about."

Bailey's final statement, the one he said could win or lose the case, followed an often dramatic two-hour presentation by U.S. Atty. James L. Browning Jr. The prosecutor urged the panel to reject Miss Hearst's "entire testimony as not credible" and pronounce her the willing revolutionary she proclaimed herself to be while in the company of the Symbionese Liberation Army.

She was, Browning said, the "rebel in search of a cause" described by government psychiatrists. Dismissing her story as "incredible," he said she took part in the robbery with "nerve" and without coercion.

In a final response before court was recessed, Browning told jurors:

"I'm sorry Patricia Hearst was kidnapped. I'm sorry anyone was kidnapped. . . . but can you assume that she was a kidnap victim for the next 19 months?"

"Don't be misled by the smokescreen that the defense has raised. Judge this case on the merits. Judge this case on the evidence."

The scene thus was set for final instructions and presentation of the case to the jury on Friday — six months to the day after Miss Hearst, the fugitive heiress, was arrested in a San Francisco apartment.

Bailey, as he had throughout the trial, told the panel that Miss Hearst was forced to take part in the April 15, 1974, bank robbery in a desperate bid to survive among her terrorist captors — "a bunch of crazy psychopaths."

"If we can't break the chain at some point in their predictions, there are going to be other

PATTY . . . liar or survivor?

Patricia Hearst. The blueprint is plain," he said, his voice at times almost a whisper.

Bailey, who depended on an emotional appeal to the jury's sympathy, all but urged them to disregard the evidence.

"You have to resort to something besides the evidence in this case; it's riddled with doubt and always will be. . . . we have given you all we have got. No one is ever going to be sure," he said.

"We all have a covenant with death," he said in husky voice, speaking without notes or microphone. "We all are going to die, and we know it. We're all going to postpone that date as long as we can. And Patricia Hearst did that, and that is why she is here and you are here."

"And the manner in which she did it is the subject of this trial," the attorney declared.

Browning, in an impassioned ending to a statement that took up all of the morning session of the 38th day of the trial, told the panel to conclude that Miss Hearst was not raped by SLA soldier William Wolfe. It was, he said, an indication her whole story did not ring true.

Holding in his hand a small stone necklace found in Miss Hearst's purse the day she was arrested, Browning reminded jurors that the trinket was a gift from Wolfe. From the witness stand, she had tearfully described Wolfe as a hated rapist who assaulted her in the first weeks of her SLA captivity.

"She couldn't stand him. But there is the little stone face. It can't say anything. But I submit it can tell us a lot."

Wolfe was slain along with five other SLA members in a fiery Los Angeles shootout with police a month after the bank robbery in which Miss Hearst is charged.

Browning also read to the jurors from Miss Hearst's own writings on feminism, confiscated when she was arrested, and noted that she described the love and common bond between women of the SLA. He urged male jurors to ask the seven women on the panel whether "in their view a person into the women's liberation movement would ever have permitted anyone in the group to have Miss Hearst raped."

Facing jurors from a lectern, Browning cited all of Miss Hearst's apparent displays of revolutionary ardor after her arrest Sept. 18. He held up the picture of her raising her arm in a clenched-fist salute and said:

"She says she didn't mean it when she gave this clenched-fist salute, that she didn't mean it when she gave her occupation as 'urban guerrilla,' that the (Patricia) Tobin tape wasn't the real Patricia Hearst."

"I ask you if you would accept that incredible story from anyone but Patricia Hearst. If you wouldn't, I ask you not to accept it from her," Browning told the jurors.

Helping Hand For Mother Nature

Mother Nature gets a helping hand from a Hugoton, Kan., farmer as he moves a center-pivot irrigator into place in a dry southwestern Kansas field. The sprinkler here is wetting a field for spring planting of corn, while nearby dryland fields may produce little this year because of drought conditions. Irrigated land produces 40 to 60 bushels of wheat per acre, while dryland production is nearer 20 bushels.

Vetoes Slash $546,273 From State Education Aid

By DON WALTON

Star Staff Writer

The budget battle is now a war.

Warning senators that their spending actions may replace his proposed income tax rate reduction with tax rate hikes, Gov. J. James Exon Thursday vetoed a $524,103 deficiency appropriation for state aid to special education.

The line item veto reduction formed the bulk of a $546,273 slice Exon took out of LB752, a deficiency appropriations bill for education programs.

The veto followed on the heels of the Unicameral's decision to hold all spending bills for action on final reading as a package.

"By making sizable appropriations in a piecemeal fashion, the Legislature has thrown all spending caution to the wind," Exon told senators in his veto message.

"Unicameral Indifferent" "It is obvious that a strong spending coalition on the floor of the Legislature is unconcerned with budget priorities, and, therefore, indifferent to the tax rates which the citizens of the state will be forced to pay."

Exon said acceptance of his spending recommendations could result in reduction of the personal income tax rate from 15 1/2 to 13 1/2 next year.

By your proposed spending actions to date, however, any chance to reduce taxes has been eliminated unless you will recant on your action or sustain the many vetoes that apparently will be necessary," Exon wrote.

The big question now is whether your current intended level of appropriations will force an increase in the state sales and income tax rates.

Recall Suggested

Earlier in the day, the governor had suggested that the Legislature recall LB752 from

Legislature

his office for further review, along with LB454, a welfare spending bill.

Revenue Chairman Cal Carsten of Avoca urged the Unicameral to do so, giving all spending proposals a priority review before final enactment.

"We've been running pretty blind," he said.

Lawmakers brought LB454 back from Exon's hands on a 26-14 vote, but declined to review the deficiency budget bill. That request was buried on a 9-25 count.

Sen Herb Duis of Gothenburg succeeded in holding all spending measures still in the Legislature at the final reading stage for priority review as a package before enactment. That motion was approved on a 26-17 vote.

Sen Frank Lewis of Bellevue strongly objected to the plan.

Although Carsten may have presented the motion to call back spending bills from Exon, "the strategy belongs to the governor," Lewis said.

I've seen this movie three times, and the plot's the same.

The Legislature should follow "an orderly process of determining the legitimate needs of the state" by approving or rejecting bills as they reach final reading, he said.

Then the governor can accept or veto them.

In other action, senators completed second round action on LB691, the operational budget bill for state agencies other than institutions of higher education.

Lewis withdrew a pending amendment to write a new salary proposal for state employees calling for a $450 boost plus 2 1/2 of current wages for each individual.

The bill cleared its second test on a 31-0 vote and will next appear on final reading, where it will now be held for action when other appropriations measures join it.

Carsten said Exon has assured him that he would take action on the spending bills in time for the Legislature to have an opportunity to attempt to override veto reductions or rejections before it goes home.

Injunction Could Erase 2 Names From Ballot

By DON WALTON

Star Staff Writer

Democratic National Committeeman Tom Kelley Thursday said he will probably seek a court injunction to prevent Secretary of State Allen Beermann from adding the names of Edward Kennedy and Hubert Humphrey to the presidential primary ballot.

"I'm about 88% sure I'll do it, and I'll probably file Friday," Kelley said in a telephone interview.

Beermann has "no authority under the law to do it, and he's fouling up the Democratic presidential primary by trying to do so," Kelley said.

Earlier this week, the secretary of state said he would add the names of the two senators to the primary ballot now that they have been placed on the presidential primary ticket in Oregon.

Beermann said state law gives him no choice since they are now "candidates" in Oregon.

Roth Kennedy and Humphrey had filed disclaimers of candidacy with Beermann after he originally attempted to affix their names to the Nebraska ballot. He then removed them from his list.

Oregon has no disclaimer provision, and the two senators were unable to remove their names from its ballot.

But neither Kennedy nor Humphrey say they are candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination and, under Nebraska law, they do not belong on the ballot no matter what Oregon may decide, Kelley said.

"Some people in Nebraska wanted to file as Humphrey delegate candidates, and they have gone to Humphrey to tell him so," the committeeman noted.

Humphrey said he was not a candidate.

That being the case, no one was allowed to file as a delegate candidate pledged to Humphrey in Nebraska, Kelley said.

"Well, if you can't file as a Humphrey delegate then he's not a presidential candidate here."

Beermann has "exceeded the purview of his authority," Kelley said.

And, in the process, he has made the Nebraska Democratic presidential primary "a farce," he said.

Kelley said he probably will file the suit in Lancaster District Court in Lincoln.

'Unicam Indifferent'

"It is obvious that a strong spending coalition on the floor of the Legislature is unconcerned with budget priorities, and, therefore, indifferent to the tax rates which the citizens of the state will be forced to pay."

Exon said acceptance of his spending recommendations could result in reduction of the personal income tax rate from 15% to 13% next year.

"By your proposed spending actions to date, however, any chance to reduce taxes has been eliminated unless you will recant on your action or sustain the many vetoes that apparently will be necessary," Exon wrote.

"The big question now is whether your current intended level of appropriations will force an increase in the state sales and income tax rates."

Recall Suggested

Earlier in the day, the governor had suggested that the Legislature recall LB752 from his office for further review, along with LB454, a welfare spending bill.

Revenue Chairman Cal Carsten of Avoca urged the Unicameral to do so, giving all spending proposals a priority review before final enactment.

"We've been running pretty blind," he said.

Lawmakers brought LB454 back from Exon's hands on a 26-14 vote, but declined to review the deficiency budget bill. That request was buried on a 9-25 count.

Sen. Herb Duis of Gothenburg succeeded in holding all spending measures still in the Legislature at the final reading stage for priority review as a package before enactment. That motion was approved on a 26-17 vote.

Sen. Frank Lewis of Bellevue strongly objected to the plan.

Although Carsten may have presented the motion to call back spending bills from Exon, "the strategy belongs to the governor," Lewis said.

"I've seen this movie three times, and the plot's the same."

The Legislature should follow "an orderly process of determining the legitimate needs of the state" by approving or rejecting bills as they reach final reading, he said.

Then the governor can accept or veto them.

In other action, senators completed second round action on LB691, the operational budget bill for state agencies other than institutions of higher education.

Lewis withdrew a pending amendment to write a new salary proposal for state employees calling for a $450 boost plus 2% of current wages for each individual.

The bill cleared its second test on a 31-0 vote and will next appear on final reading, where it will now be held for action when other appropriations measures join it.

Carsten said Exon has assured him that he would take action on the spending bills in time for the Legislature to have an opportunity to attempt to override veto reductions or rejections before it goes home.

UAW To Seek Shorter Hours

DETROIT (AP) — United Auto Workers president Leonard Woodcock said Thursday that a push for shorter working hours without reduced pay will be the union's main goal in contract talks this summer.

Woodcock said a cut in time spent on the job would increase employment opportunities for thousands of UAW members who were laid off during the 1974-75 sales slump.

And he warned that the 1.4 million-member union might strike over the issue if a "satisfactory solution" to industry joblessness is not achieved with company bargainers.

However, Woodcock declined to offer any specific plan for reducing work time, saying the union needs flexibility at the bargaining table "so as not to be locked into any one position."

The central theme of the 1976 bargaining has to be job security and it has to be achieved by reducing the work time," he said in an opening address to delegates at a collective bargaining convention.

During the three-day conference, some 2,800 delegates will whittle hundreds of contract proposals into a program to be presented to industry bargainers when formal talks begin in July.

Contracts covering about 850,000 auto and farm implement workers in the United States and Canada expire in September. The UAW estimates 75,000 jobs have been lost since present contracts were negotiated in 1973.

Woodcock said work time could be reduced by cutting the current 40-hour work week, trimming overtime, the work year or the total work time put in by an employee. "Or it could be any combination of these to create more jobs. That's the key," he said.

During a news conference after his speech, Woodcock would not rule out a push for a 32-hour week at 40 hours' pay, a proposal sought by several UAW locals. However, top union sources say that proposal is too radical and costly for serious consideration.

Woodcock said the union also would push for increases in the cost-of-living wage adjustment formula, company-paid supplemental unemployment benefits for laid-off workers and pension benefits.

The average hourly auto worker currently earns $6.76 an hour in straight pay and about $3 an hour in benefits. The payscale ranges from $6.53 for an assembler to $8.11 for the top-rated skilled employee. Before the current contract took effect, the average worker was paid just over $5 an hour in straight pay.

In 1973, the union settled for a 3% wage increase during each year of the three-year contract. The increase was tied into the national average increase in productivity. However, the cost of living formula since 1973 has boosted worker earnings by $1.06 an hour.

Woodcock noted the economy's fragile state will discourage both sides from forcing a strike and will require the union to "fashion our demands with care." But he also noted the industry has recovered since last fall and its profits have been rising sharply.

"We didn't come to 1976 to go backwards or to stand still," he said. " . . . this talk of strikes doesn't mean we're going to the bargaining table with a chip on our shoulders. We will go with sober determination for an equitable settlement."

The UAW estimates it will have $175 million in its strike fund when contracts expire. A 10-week strike against GM in 1970 cost the union $160 million.

Princess, Husband Ponder Break

London (UPI) — Princess Margaret, whose friendship with a Bohemian "commune" dweller 17 years her junior sparked the breakup of her marriage, and the Earl of Snowdon are studying a separation plan drawn up by Queen Elizabeth, court sources said Thursday.

At Buckingham Palace, the queen consulted her lawyers on the problems raised by the determination of her sister and Snowdon to separate or divorce.

The sources said a divorce in the future could not be ruled out but it would raise so many complex problems — and drag the case into the courts — that a legal separation was adopted as the best solution for the present.

The sources said the couple were studying the plan and that both the Queen Mother and Prince Philip had been told the details. The plan was drawn up after the queen consulted with the privy council, the Archbishop of Canterbury and her legal advisers.

Friends of the couple said one of the reasons the marriage reached the breakup point after many reconciliations was the princess's friendship with Roddy Llewellyn and her adoption of his Bohemian lifestyle some weekends.

There was no suggestion that the relationship of the 45-year-old sister of the queen and 28-year-old socialite Llewellyn was anything more than that.

But Snowdon, 46, who has himself led a very private life, was described as "unbearably embarrassed" by the recent publication of photographs showing his wife and Llewellyn in swim suits on the Caribbean Island of Mustique where they have holidayed together the past three years.

Llewellyn was reported in seclusion Thursday at a 200-year-old farmhouse where he and a group of members of the younger set have established a "commune" of sorts.

One of the commune members, John

Rendell, who was accompanied by an Irish wolfhound when he talked to reporters, said:

"Roddy is a good-hearted guy and would not want to hurt anybody. What has happened is very unfortunate, but it has happened."

Villagers at the hamlet of Grittleton in Wiltshire, near the commune, said the princess spent several weekends there and was seen working in the garden in old clothes.

There were parties in the farmhouse some nights and sing-songs around the piano — which both Margaret and Llewellyn play. On one occasion the princess slept in the only furnished bedroom of the house while her detective bodyguard was sent to sleep in the village.

There was speculation that Princess Margaret might renounce her claim to the throne if she divorced. She is fifth in succession. But it was not clear whether she would lose her $70,000 a year allowance.

Lebanese Battles Rage Amid Ruins

Beirut, Lebanon (UPI) — Moslems and Christians battled with heavy artillery amid the ruins of luxury hotels along the seaside Thursday, plunging Lebanon further into the anarchy wrought by civil war and rebellion in the army.

Political warlords, under pressure from Syria, plotted moves to end the current round of fighting through a new agreement approved by all sides, but rebel army leaders insisted it include the resignation of President Suleiman Franjeh.

Fighting in and around Beirut claimed at least 10 lives with nearly 30 persons wounded. Casualties in the weeklong series of clashes which followed an army coup rose to 200 dead and more than 470 wounded.

The worst battles were around the ruins of Beirut's luxury hotels on the seafloor, where leftist forces brought up a 105 mm recoilless rifle and a twin-barrelled anti-aircraft gun to pound the already devastated Holiday Inn.

Right-wing Phalangists, entrenched in the battered hotel, poured a steady rain of rockets at their attackers and machine gunners on both sides raked the area.

In the east, a heavy overnight battle between Phalangists at Kahleah and Moslem leftists from Aley died away to sporadic small arms fire after leftists had used artillery.

Aley is the hometown of Socialist leader Kamel Jumblatt, an avowed foe of Franjeh whose presidential palace lies near Kahleah.

"We fired around the palace not to let Franjeh sleep,"

Jumblatt said.

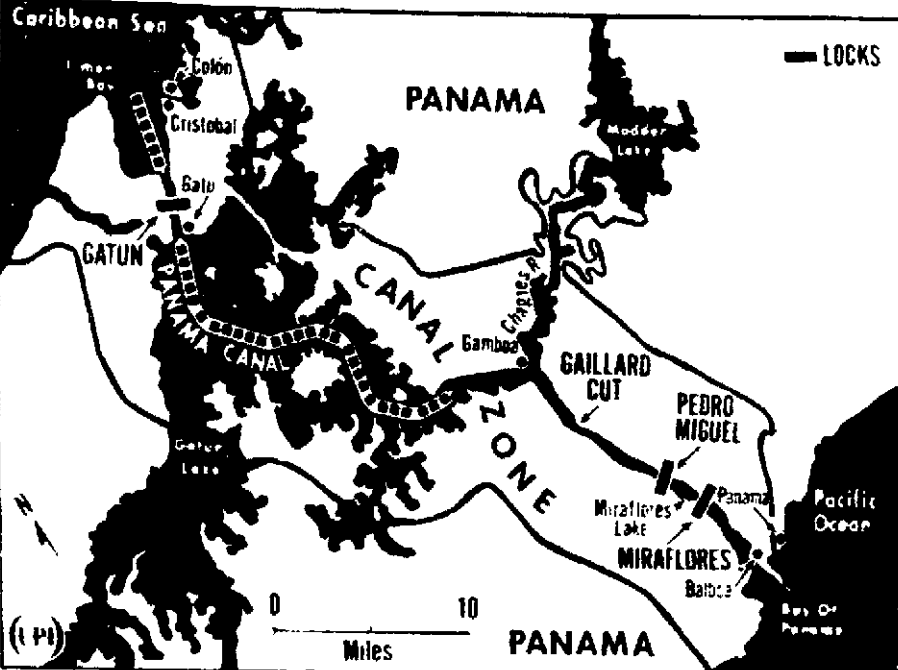

The commander of the rebel army "corrective movement," Brig. Gen. Aziz Ahdab, whose bid for power a week ago sparked the current conflict, also repeated his call for Franjeh to quit.

"He should resign immediately to avoid further bloodshed," Ahdab said.

Jumblatt has been a strong supporter of the rebel Lebanese Arab army, a group of Moslem deserters led by Lt. Ahmed Khatib, which is now linked to the movement started by Ahdab.

Syria halted plans by Khatib to remove Franjeh by force, using Palestinian troops to block the advance of armored columns.

More Than 100 Ships Are Stuck In Panama Canal Zone 'Sickout'

CRISTOBAL, Panama Canal Zone (AP) — More than 100 ships were backed up at the Panama Canal on Thursday as a U.S. employee sickout resulted in the most expensive traffic jam in the canal's 62-year history.

Only six ships inched through the canal on Wednesday. Normal traffic is about 40 ships a day.

By early Thursday 101 ships had joined logjams at both ends of the canal and 70 more were expected by the weekend.

The last strike at the canal tied up 118 ships for several days in August 1973.

About 700 striking American employees are hoping the costs of the traffic jam — an average $8,000 a day in operating costs for each ship — will bring pressure on Congress to stop proposed pay scale changes and other economy moves aimed at reducing a $14 million deficit expected by the Panama Canal Co.

Company officials say an underlying motive for the job action, which began Monday, may be fear among the 3,500 American employees that the contract changes are aimed at phasing them out and replacing them with local workers as part of negotiations with Panama for a new canal treaty.

By noon Thursday, canal authorities had managed to persuade only six pilots out of a 200-man force to turn out for work. Each ship that passes through the canal must have at least one pilot, and some of the heavier vessels as many as four.

Strikes against a government agency such as the canal company are illegal, and so the remaining pilots have called in sick, along with hundreds of teachers, tugboat crewmen and other employees, prompting canal authorities to begin challenging the authenticity of their doctors' certificates.

The doctors in turn were reportedly consulting lawyers about the challenges. Panamanian doctors were complaining that their competence was being insulted when Canal Zone Gov. Harold R. Parfitt announced that only health certificates from Gorgas and Cocoa Solo hospitals would be accepted.

Canal Zone elementary schools were operating Thursday, but high schools were closed as teachers called in sick.

Earlier, Parfitt declared the sickout illegal and threatened to bring court injunctions against the strikers. He said he would man the canal with workers from the United States and troops.

One-fourth of the canal zone's 40,000 American residents are members of the military.

If the strike continues through the weekend, Parfitt said, shippers will probably begin routing their traffic away from the canal, with possible financial costs to the canal company. Shipping agents in Panama already are receiving requests from their customers for possible rerouting schedules.

Bank Unit Called 'Petulant Dinosaur'

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Banking Committee chairman Henry Reuss criticized the American Bankers Association Thursday for opposing banking reform legislation while seeking legal protection from competition.

At a hearing on a bill to restructure federal financial regulatory agencies, Reuss noted ABA president J. Rex Dowe's characterization of the Financial Reform Act as "totally abhorrent."

The ABA is a selfish and petulant dinosaur and it is about time you entered the 20th Century, the Wisconsin Democrat told Dowe.

The Financial Reform Act would give thrift institutions greater lending powers and consolidate federal regulation of banks by three agencies into a single commission.

Dowe testified the ABA has always supported needed reforms of the financial industry.

Dowe also denied uttering out loud the phrase "totally abhorrent" to describe the bill. Although the phrase was contained in a written statement submitted to the committee, Dowe noted that he had toned down his description of the bill when he read his statement to the committee.

In answer to questions from Rep. William Morehead, D-Pa., Dowe declined to specify what he thought could be salvaged from the bill with ABA approval.

Kathleen F. O'Reilly, legislative director of the Consumer Federation of America criticized banks for disregarding the consumer.

The newspaper An Nahar said the Phalangists visited Franjeh with a "tentative accord" approved by the Palestinians and Moslem religious leaders.

The slow progress of Syrian mediation efforts was attributed to the Syrian president's demands for all Lebanese political factions, and the Palestinians, to come to terms on a settlement that would be honored by all sides.

The outlines of the Syrian solution include agreement that Franjeh must resign in exchange for the dissolution of rebel movements within the army and the re-acceptance of the agreement on reforms Syria negotiated last month after the last cease-fire on Jan. 22.

Church Joins Demo Contest

By United Press International
The contest for the Democratic presidential nomination got a new entrant Thursday. But the Republican field stayed at two, with Ronald Reagan suggesting that according to previous standards President Ford is the one who should think about withdrawing.
Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, made his candidacy official with a speech in Idaho City, Idaho, castigating a national "leadership of weakness and fear."
Church, 51, is a 19-year Senate veteran and head of the special committee preparing its final report on U.S. intelligence activities.
Church is planning to enter the "late" primaries beginning with Nebraska May 11.
The next primary is in North Carolina, where Jimmy Carter and George Wallace compete against one another next week for the third straight time. Both of them, along with Reagan, were in the state Thursday.
Reagan said in Greensboro, the pressure from Republicans on him to quit the race is "engineered from the same place that engineered the pressure to keep me out of the race in the first place — the White House."

CHURCH . . . of Idaho.

Noting that some media commentators said last year Ford should consider withdrawing if Reagan got 40% or more in the early primaries, the former governor of California asked, "why doesn't he quit?"
White House press secretary Ron Nessen said Ford has neither asked nor authorized anyone to sound out Reagan about quitting the race, and some conservative congressmen said they are encouraging Reagan to stay in until the end.
Carter said in Charlotte he would win the primary because of his stand on the issues. Referring to criticism of him by Wallace, Carter said, "I don't ever want to get in-involved in a contest between personalities. I want people to look at me and my record as governor and look at Gov. Wallace and his record as governor and decide which one you think would be a better president."

Wallace, campaigning in Kinston, N.C., said his recent attacks on Carter were caused by Carter's criticism of him. "My opponent jumped on me bad in Florida and Illinois," Wallace said. The Alabama governor also continued his efforts to link Carter to Sen. George McGovern, the 1972 Democratic presidential nominee.

Carter responded by saying, "I'm not a warmed over McGovern." He said Wallace's criticism of him shows "Gov. Wallace is underestimating the people of North Carolina."
Saying "it's never too late to try" for the presidency, Church emphasized his experience and expertise on foreign affairs, telling supporters:
"When it comes to dealing with a hundred foreign governments or negotiating with Russia or China in this dangerous world, I suggest to you that the presidency is no place for on-the-job training."
In his attack on current foreign policy, he referred to the CIA and to multinational corporations, subjects of highly publicized Senate investigations he headed.
"It is a leadership of weakness and fear which insists that we must imitate the Russians in our treatment of foreign peoples, adopting their methods of bribery, blackmail, abduction and coercion as if they were our own."
"And it is a leadership of weakness and fear which permits the most powerful agencies of our government — the CIA, the FBI, and the IRS — to systematically ignore the very laws intended to protect the liberties of the people."
Fred Harris said Pennsylvania is the "keystone" of his effort to resurrect a flagging campaign. Opening his effort for the state's April 27 primary, Harris said he would spend "several hundred thousand dollars" in the primary campaign.
Humbert Humphrey was urged to come off the sidelines and enter some primaries by the Chicago Sun-Times, which said in an editorial Thursday he has "an opportunity and an obligation to get into this race in earnest."

Carter Takes Pot Position

New York (UPI) — Democratic presidential front-runner Jimmy Carter was quoted Thursday as saying he favors the decriminalization of marijuana with such a move to be decided individually by the states.
The former Georgia governor said in an interview with High Times, a New York-based magazine, that removal of criminal penalties involving the use of marijuana would be a "realistic approach."
"I favor the decriminalization of marijuana," Carter was quoted as saying in the article to be published by High Times in June.
"Oregon, California, Alaska, and maybe a couple of other states have already decriminalized, and I think that's proved to be a realistic approach," Carter said, according to the article.
Carter said he was "not sure about the legitimacy of the federal government" taking action to remove criminal penalties for the use of marijuana.
"Now in the field of alcohol, for instance, it's been a right reserved for individual states and I don't think there are any uniform federal laws on the sale of alcohol except for the taxation of it," Carter said. "I think decriminalization is a matter best left up to the states for the time being."

Carter also said that if elected president he would "certainly be personally responsible for a thorough investigation and correction of the defects of the (federal) Drug Enforcement Agency."
His remarks on the DEA followed an investigation of that agency by Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., another democratic presidential hopeful.
"Instead of just investigating it," Carter said, "I intend to run the thing so that we can be proud of it and so that it can be effective. Most of our hard drugs come in from Mexico, about 90%."
A spokesman for High Times said the article was based on a taped interview with Carter in New York March 17 by news editor A. Craig Copetas.

FEC Refuses To Fund Ahead

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Election Commission on Thursday refused to certify $1 million ahead of schedule for the national presidential nominating conventions. If Congress does not reconstitute the commission, the conventions could be headed for financial chaos.
Under new election law, the Democratic and Republican conventions are to be financed with $2.18 million each in federal funds.
Each party asked for early certification of $500,000 for the forthcoming April-June quarter because, under a Supreme Court ruling, the FEC will be unable to certify federal funds after next Monday unless Congress reorganizes the commission.

Under existing policy, however, the quarterly certification would not be made until the quarter began — nine days after the court deadline. The commission voted 4 to 2 on Thursday to, in effect, retain that policy and not certify the funds ahead of April 1.
Commissioner Vernon Thomson said: "It would be imprudent for us to be splashing out the money they request," and other commissioners voiced similar opinions.
In addition to the immediate $500,000, the Democrats sought advance certification for later payments of $600,000 and $222,000. Under the quarterly payment policy, the Democrats have already received $860,000 and the Republicans $750,000.
In a letter to the FEC received only three minutes before it was considered by the panel, Democratic National Chairman

Robert S. Strauss referred to "the peril to our national political conventions should there be any gap in the availability of payments to cover convention expenses."
He said the party relied in its convention planning on the continued availability of the funds. Robert S. Carter, treasurer of the Republican National Convention, said his organization was "entering into a number of contractual obligations due, in a large part, during the second quarter."
In other matching fund action, the FEC certified $583,273 to seven presidential candidates, including two — Sen. Birch Bayh and Gov. Milton J. Shapp — who have dropped out of active candidacy. Bayh received $15,942 and Shapp $8,003.
President Ford got the most money Thursday, $252,805, and Jimmy Carter topped the Democrats with $149,337.

French Premier Blasts American Intervention

PARIS (AP) — Premier Jacques Chirac blasted what he termed "uncalled for" American intervention in French internal affairs Thursday while U.S. Ambassador Kenneth Rush met with Socialist leader Francois Mitterand, reportedly for the third time in 18 months.
Mitterand attacked what he said were President Ford's "particularly unwarranted remarks" about French domestic politics.
Warnings from Ford, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and American diplomats that Communist participation in a future French left-wing coalition government would be viewed with disfavor in Washington have led to an uproar among French politicians.

The U.S. Embassy in Rome, uneasy over possible participation by Communists in an Italian government, repeated a similar warning to Italian officials Thursday.
Both the Italian and French Communist parties say they are pursuing their own independent brands of Marxism-Leninism and are publicly committed to achieving power through parliamentary means.

While the United States is upset over the prospect of Communists sharing power in NATO allies France and Italy, the Kremlin is also making angry statements. But Moscow's irritation is over the Western parties' pursuit of "national" communism.
Talking to correspondents shortly before Mitterand and four of his top aides went to lunch at Rush's embassy residence, Chirac said he found it "shocking" that the Socialist leaders should turn down repeated invitations from President Valery Giscard d'Estaing but accept one from Rush "only a few days after the uncalled for intervention by the American authorities in the internal affairs of our country."
Emerging from his 2½-hour luncheon with Rush, Mitterand brushed aside Chirac's complaint, declaring, "Mr. Chirac is not the depository of the honor of France."

Planners On Wrong Tangent

The City-County Planning Commission this week finally mustered enough votes to recommend denial of a special permit to operate a small mental retardation center in southwest Lincoln.

It was a perplexing decision in which the commission seemed to substitute political reasoning for consideration of planning factors.

Planning commissioners in the five-member majority which recommended denial of the special permit application of Betty Gant apparently agreed that such small centers are needed and are an integral part of the concept of community-based care of the retarded which is currently emphasized in Nebraska.

If planning factors figured in the decision at all, the only one seemed to be that rough terrain on part of the acreage where the center would be located is unsuitable for mentally retarded people. True, some of the terrain is hilly. It is not a sterile, level environment — but then it shouldn't have to be. The house which would serve as the center is a beautiful home in a beautiful setting. It is an esthetically pleasing environment in which to care for the mentally retarded.

The key reasoning in recommending denial of the application, it seems, is that the center is opposed by Yankee Hill area residents. Testimony given by neighbors at public hearings on the application made that perfectly clear.

But we wonder if the planning commission was discharging its responsibilities in taking local opposition into consideration in making a decision. It seems to us that is a political factor, something the elected City Council and mayor should consider in granting or denying or vetoing zoning changes or special use permit applications.

The planning commission should be recommending on the basis of conformance with the comprehensive plan, compatible land use, accepted public planning policy, and factors in that vein.

If the application deserves to be turned down because area residents fear mentally retarded people, or are afraid their property values will suffer — legitimate concerns, for sure — or they just don't like Ms. Gant or if there is racial prejudice involved, those considerations should be taken up by the council when the application is before its members.

The planning commission shouldn't act as a social arbiter.

Can Support Be Sustained?

Further evidence that additional funding is needed to build the kind of university system Nebraskans seem to want has been found in healthy floor support for the Appropriations Committee's higher education budget bill. That bill, which provides for a 23% increase in state tax support for the University of Nebraska, won 26-3 first stage approval by state senators Wednesday.

The committee's proposed tax support level is $18 million above the current NU budget figure and more than $11 million higher than the 9% hike recommended by Gov. Jim Exon.

The committee cannot present a united front. Chairman Richard Marvel of Hastings and Lincoln and vice chairman Robert Clark of Sidney oppose much of the added money proposed by a majority of members on the panel.

But the committee product nevertheless has won significant support on the floor in its first test. Votes on individual proposals prior to the vote to advance the entire package enjoyed similar support.

The question, of course, is whether support for an expanded university budget can be maintained the rest of the way through the legislative process. The bill can still be amended and debated on its way to final reading. And there is a serious question as to whether line-item vetoes by Gov. Exon — which are sure to come — can be overturned on a one-shot override attempt. Thirty votes may be hard to produce. There is an indication that if the governor moderates his budget-cutting approach, his vetoes will be sustained, but if he cuts too deeply there is the chance he will be overridden.

Final outcome being beside the point, at this stage it is significant that the committee's budget bill has such solid backing. It would seem to indicate that Nebraskans want a learning institution the football fans can also be proud of — contrary rhetoric up to this point notwithstanding.

Sen. Donald Dworak of Columbus, who is a leader in challenging the committee proposal, said of the votes Wednesday, "This legislative body does not reflect the basic thinking of Nebraskans. They've had enough taxes and they've had enough government."

We're not sure what citizen resentment against bigger government, even if true, has to do with support for the university. At any rate, the issue should not be confused.

Nebraskans want a first class university and they can afford to have one. The committee proposals entail reasonable, not excessive, expenditures.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Thanks To Reagan

WASHINGTON — Most Democratic strategists and most political analysts wish Ronald Reagan would pull out of the race for the Republican nomination. They attribute this wish to "most Republicans, who are supposed to see the Reagan campaign — after five defeats — as pointless."

The Reagan primary challenge — which is the strongest ever made against a sitting president in modern times — is far from pointless in the eyes of most Republicans. On the contrary, in terms of public policy and party strength, Reagan's remarkable effort is jabbing a harpin into Democratic balloons.

Consider, first, what Reagan is doing for the nation. He has caused the interment of the long-dead remains of a policy of accommodation to the demands of the Soviet Union. When President Ford expunged the word "detente" from his official vocabulary during the Florida primary, the event was more semantical than semantic. A visible hardening has taken place in our foreign policy posture. Thanks to Reagan, Cuba was declared an "outlaw" by an administration that was anxious to re-establish relations with Castro only a year ago.

In domestic affairs the Reagan challenge has made it politically unwise for Democrats to try to bust the Ford budget. Although the President's new political managers get the praise for his early primary wins, the credit belongs to men like Alan Greenspan and Arthur Burns, whose anti-inflation policies have been permitted to work.

Now consider what Reagan's challenge has done to Ford. He has transformed an accidental presidential candidate. Thanks to Reagan, the President is now recognized as a candidate capable of getting votes outside Grand Rapids. Because many in the media want to see a conservative defeat, Ford — reviled only six months ago as a clumsy klutz and general dumbhead — is now seen as a shrewd politician and a popular winner.

Even more important for the President, the Reagan challenge has provided a shakedown cruise. For example, the charges against Bo Callaway, if sprung in late October, would have been blown up to scandalous proportions.

That's what Reagan has been doing for the nation and for the President, now, what has been done for the Republican Party?

He has made Republicans newsworthy, which they have not been since 1952. Were it not for Reagan, the only Republican news this year would be bi-weekly announcements and withdrawals of Nelson Rockefeller. If the Republican side were lifeless, the focus of media attention would be exclusively on Democrats, and all the credit for necessary changes in the Ford foreign policy could be claimed by the Democratic contenders.

Well and good, says the White House, but enough's enough, now we must think of Republican "party unity." That's silly, the time to close ranks behind whoever wins is when a contest exists a great many more people in the ranks. No ideological schism exists between Ford and Reagan, as used to exist between Goldwater and Rockefeller. Party unity was the Republican need of the last decade, party revivification is this decade's requirement — and the Reagan challenge is the life of the party.

No wonder so many Democrats wish the Reagan campaign would fold up quickly. And no wonder Democrats are so unhappy with the postponing of Ford as center-right, where they want to be, and not far right, where they wish to portray their opposition. Reagan's primary presence continues to strengthen Ford's general-election chances.

Negatives? The common-situs pecking veto which the President did to placate the far right, will mean that organized labor will work much harder for Democrats in the campaign. And, if Reagan loses, some dealers will refuse to follow him into the Ford parade. But the positives to the party and the nation of a continued Reagan candidacy far outweigh the negatives.

ANTHONY LEWIS

WASHINGTON — Fifty years ago Attorney General Harlan F. Stone said the Bureau of Investigation, as the FBI was then called, "is not concerned with political or other opinions of individuals. It is concerned only with their conduct, and then only with such conduct as is forbidden by the laws of the United States."

That principle, so essential for a federal police agency, has been dangerously violated in recent years. The FBI not only investigated individuals because of their lawful opinions, we have learned, but persecuted some because their opinions offended the FBI director. And all this went on without any effective restraint by the Justice Department, Congress or the courts.

From here on, such abuses will be much less likely. The reason is a series of guidelines laid down by the present attorney general, Edward H. Levi, to govern the work of the FBI — not only the guidelines themselves but the spirit that informs them. It seems right to note a genuinely reassuring development in Washington.

One exceptional aspect of these guidelines is that, instead of presenting Congress with the usual executive fait accompli, Levi actively consulted congressional committees in drawing them up. The version announced the other day was the 28th draft made by a Justice Department committee, and the final form reflected congressional suggestions made during the long process.

"He was very open about it," one experienced and often skeptical congressional staff expert remarked. "There was no attempt to slip things past us."

Not Ever Above The Law

ATTORNEY GENERAL LEVI ... lays down new guidelines ...

The biggest change was made in the draft of guidelines for domestic security investigations. The final version omitted a section allowing "preventive action" by the FBI to stop anticipated violence threatening "life or property." Although the early draft had tried to put careful restrictions on such action, congressmen continued to fear that the rules might allow blackmail or other disruptive tactics used in J. Edgar Hoover's Counter Program.

The final Levi rules for domestic security neither allow nor prohibit

"preventive action." That continues to trouble some who would like a flat ban. But there is a fundamental safeguard in the Levi guidelines in this area. The FBI is to work on domestic security matters not at large but for purposes of law-enforcement. Levi testified, in language reminiscent of Stone's:

"The purpose of the investigation must be the detection of unlawful conduct and not merely the monitoring of disfavored or troublesome activities and surely not of unpopular views."

That principle would exclude such things as the most notorious of Hoover abuses, the wiretapping and harassment of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. The Levi guidelines in fact put special restraints on taps and other intrusive investigative techniques.

Electronic surveillance, mail covers and infiltrated informants are barred altogether in preliminary security investigations. They can be used only in so-called "full investigations," which have to be approved by headquarters on a strict showing of possible crimes involving force or violence and must be reported to the attorney general within a week.

The rules also prohibit use of planted informants after someone has been charged with a crime, or to obtain "privileged information." These restrictions are designed to prevent, for example, an informant's listening to a defendant's talks with his lawyer — a practice attributed to the government in one political prosecution of the Nixon era.

Guidelines have been approved or are being drafted in a half-dozen areas of FBI work apart from domestic security. One, for example, is personnel investigations for the White House — where some of the Nixon abuses came.

One approved guideline says that field investigations of potential appointees shall be made only when requested by the president or a handful of his top aides, and only when the prospective appointee himself has consented. These provisions would prevent such an episode as the FBI investigation of Daniel Schorr that the Nixon White House ordered for purposes of intimidation and then explained, falsely, as related to an appointment for Schorr.

Of course, the best internal guidelines can be avoided, or changed by future officials. But Levi has urged Congress to write some rules into statutes, and he is about to call for a new law restricting electronic surveillance in security cases. Most important, he has introduced a new mood in which the FBI expects and has begun to accept scrutiny by the Justice Department and Congress.

In this performance, Edward Levi has justified the hopes placed in him when he took office last year. I have been critical of him for taking too favorable a view, as I felt, of executive privilege and secrecy in foreign affairs. Perhaps in those matters he has a certain respect for "experts" that he would not in his own domain of domestic law. In both areas it is important, as Harlan Stone said, that agents of the American government be "not above the law."

Money In Whose Bank?

Lincoln, Neb.
I'm writing about something we have all suffered in silence for months now. I am driven to write by a piece of propaganda sent to me in my Lincoln Electric System bill. It tells of the great money-saving possibilities in conserving energy. I pulled out my old electric bills and found that I am now using 10% less electricity than at this time last year. I have been rewarded for this conservation by a 31% increase in my bill. I object not only to the increase but to the use of my money to print this rot. I followed their energy-saving tips and, sure enough, just as the pamphlet said, it led to "money in the bank."

Unfortunately the money is in their account.

Letter To Korea

Lincoln, Neb.
We have sent the following letter to President Park Chung Mee, Seoul, Korea.
The Board of Lincoln Church Women United (Lincoln, Nebraska, U.S.A.) is deeply distressed by the March 1 arrest of Miss Oh Chung Lee, president of Church Women United in Korea, following her participation in an ecumenical service at a Roman Catholic Church celebrating Korean independence. Many of our sons and husbands fought alongside South Koreans against the Communist North because we oppose the communist practice of arresting and imprisoning people who express dissent.
"Now we find that your government is adopting that same practice."
"We feel great shock that any government should so violate human rights and we protest your arrest of Miss Lee and others like her who are showing their concern for the poor and oppressed."
Copies of this letter have also gone to Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Rep. Charles Thone.

Ponders Words Against Deeds

Lincoln, Neb.
The time to tell it like it is has arrived. During the last city election, all candidates for city office, including Helen Boosalis and Sam Schwartzkopf, were opposed to the Northeast Radial when they appeared before the Clinton Neighborhood Organization. Helen was also opposed to four-lane streets which destroy the character of neighborhoods.
Almost all the people on Fremont Street believed Helen and we worked hard for her election. I found a few people north and south of Fremont Street who thought she would change her mind after the election.
Now — what is the record today? She supports plans for a modified ground-level Northeast Radial which would terminate at 48th and Fremont Streets. From 48th Street, the plan calls for a four-lane street on Fremont Street to 58th Street. I now ponder her words against her deeds and come up with the sad conclusion that we are left holding the sack.
There can be no misunderstanding what the people want. We made that very clear in our letters to the Public Works Department and when we appeared before the City Council. The people voted for a new deal. They got the old deal trimmed with lace.

Era Of The Train

Lincoln, Neb.
To me, there was something romantic about a train as it came chugging around the mountains to the western plains, through the valley, uphill and down again. It stopped at the way station for water and fuel. The conductor would go through the cars shouting the next stop, and take the tickets. Before the stop he would alert the passengers to be ready. Out on the platform, he would swing his little red lantern, always trimmed and ready.
The building of the railroads was hard work and only hardy men not afraid of work signed up. The trains were a Godsend for the people traveling, and for bringing in the mail and provisions to places far from the railroads.
Before the trains, there was the pony express with riders ever so many miles. There would be stations along the way with fresh horses and riders to make time as they traveled across the Midwest bringing the mail. There were freight trains to carry cattle and other cars for other needed commodities. Until tracks and family cars came, trains were big business, but now it is pretty slow.
The engineer at the throttle and the brakeman swinging his lantern, shouting, "All aboard! Step lively!" are almost a thing of the past.

MRS. W. R. SCHOENLEBER

Water Rate Increases

Lincoln, Neb.
Good reporting on the recent hearing on water and sewer rates. The headline, "Water Rates To Be Studied Reluctantly," conveyed the obvious attitude of the Water and Sewer Advisory Board.
It became clear at the hearing that the water system business manager and some of the Advisory Board members want to continue the present rate structure with little modification. Only one other area of our entire nation has such a rate structure — a county adjacent to Washington, D.C. Is our situation this critical? If so, why?
Do most Lincoln residents really approve of the present rates? This impression was given, inasmuch as "only 34% of customers complained" in a two-month period.
Why do the system and board want to continue to penalize those who enlarge gardens, have larger families, or move into new homes or formerly vacant housing, while favoring those with water-cooled air-conditioning systems?
Why are some industries, such as Goodyear, permitted to get water way below average costs, with a base rate of 14 cents per unit?
Why penalize residents to build increased facilities principally for industries whose use of water and sewers is much greater? Can we be sure that the desired additional revenue will be used only for announced purposes?
One wonders if the Advisory Board is realistically representing most Lincoln residents. Why must we have continually higher water and sewer charges?
Another hearing is scheduled for Wednesday, March 24, at 3:00 p.m. in the City Council chambers. Are we prepared to pay constantly increasing unequal rates for years to come? Obviously, the time to voice complaints and to press for equitable water rates is now.

Seward, Neb.
I would like to reply to The Star editorial of March 13, "The Malpractice Muddle." I am distressed that a publication as reputable as The Lincoln Star would editorialize on a legislative subject which has not been thoroughly researched or understood.
The editorial stated that insurance costs would not be helped by passage of LB 703. This is incorrect. As proposed, LB 703 would create an excess liability fund which would be funded by health care providers. This fund would pay any judgment over $100,000. This in itself would eliminate the need for health care providers to buy excess liability policies above this amount. As the cost of the basic $100,000 policy goes up today, so does the excess liability policy cost.

Also stated was the concern that patient rights were being legislated away. How untrue. Any citizen would still retain the right to have his case heard by a jury of his peers. The review panel as originally proposed would give an opinion only as to just grounds for a suit. If the panel found in favor of the plaintiff, expert testimony would be available. Should the panel find against the plaintiff and trial ensues and the plaintiff loses, the plaintiff assumes the health care providers' cost of defense. Is this not just? Limits of liability are already found in our laws. Workman's compensation is one and the guest statute dealing with automobiles even forbids suits, except in the case of gross negligence. Sen. John Cavanaugh used the example of a man's earning $40,000 a year, being able to collect only $50,000 of his life's projected earnings. Five hundred thousand dollars invested at 10% results in an annual income of $50,000 for life, plus a half-million-dollar estate.

Sen. Cavanaugh was quoted as saying that "this bill was brought and paid for." The Lincoln Star seems to concur. I am surprised that he and this publication think so little of the integrity of our state's Unicameral members. I hope that at no time and on no subject can any of its members be "bought and paid for." The Nebraska Association of Nurse Anesthetists has been lobbying for six weeks for passage of LB 703 and our only expense has been in time and energy.

The editorial gives the impression that LB 703 is only a physicians' interest bill. The provisions of LB 703 would help decrease the cost of providing medical care by physicians, hospitals and their employees and nurse anesthetists. As the cost of malpractice insurance increases, the cost of medical care increases and every person with medical insurance ends up paying for it with increased premiums. Presently, if malpractice insurance becomes unavailable, medical care becomes unavailable. If the cost continues to increase, it may become less expensive and more expedient to go for health care to neighboring states such as South Dakota, which has already passed similar legislation.

Planners On Wrong Tangent

The City-County Planning Commission this week finally mustered enough votes to recommend denial of a special permit to operate a small mental retardation center in southwest Lincoln.

It was a perplexing decision in which the commission seemed to substitute political reasoning for consideration of planning factors.

Planning commissioners in the five-member majority which recommended denial of the special permit application of Bettie Gant apparently agreed that such small centers are needed and are an integral part of the concept of community-based care of the retarded which is currently emphasized in Nebraska.

If planning factors figured in the decision at all, the only one seemed to be that rough terrain on part of the acreage where the center would be located is unsuitable for mentally retarded people. True, some of the terrain is hilly. It is not a sterile, level environment — but then it shouldn't have to be. The house which would serve as the center is a beautiful home in a beautiful setting. It is an esthetically pleasing environment in which to care for the mentally retarded.

The key reasoning in recommending denial of the application, it seems, is that the center is opposed by Yankee Hill area residents. Testimony given by neighbors at public hearings on the application made that perfectly clear.

But we wonder if the planning commission was discharging its responsibilities in taking local opposition into consideration in making a decision. It seems to us that is a political factor, something the elected City Council and mayor should consider in granting or denying or vetoing zoning changes or special use permit applications.

The planning commission should be recommending on the basis of conformance with the comprehensive plan, compatible land use, accepted public planning policy, and factors in that vein.

If the application deserves to be turned down because area residents fear mentally retarded people, or are afraid their property values will suffer — legitimate concerns, for sure — or they just don't like Ms. Gant or if there is racial prejudice involved, those considerations should be taken up by the council when the application is before its members.

The planning commission shouldn't act as a social arbiter.

Can Support Be Sustained?

Further evidence that additional funding is needed to build the kind of university system Nebraskans seem to want has been found in healthy floor support for the Appropriations Committee's higher education budget bill. That bill, which provides for a 23% increase in state tax support for the University of Nebraska, won 26-3 first stage approval by state senators Wednesday.

The committee's proposed tax support level is $18 million above the current NU budget figure and more than $11 million higher than the 9% hike recommended by Gov. Jim Exon.

The committee cannot present a united front. Chairman Richard Marvel of Hastings and Lincoln and vice chairman Robert Clark of Sidney oppose much of the added money proposed by a majority of members on the panel.

But the committee product nevertheless has won significant support on the floor in its first test. Votes on individual proposals prior to the vote to advance the entire package enjoyed similar support.

The question, of course, is whether support for an expanded university budget can be maintained the rest of the way through the legislative process. The bill can still be amended and debated on its way to final reading. And there is a serious question as to whether line-item vetoes by Gov. Exon — which are sure to come — can be overturned on a one-shot override attempt. Thirty votes may be hard to produce. There is an indication that if the governor moderates his budget-cutting approach, his vetoes will be sustained, but if he cuts too deeply, there is the chance he will be overridden.

Final outcome being beside the point, at this stage it is significant that the committee's budget bill has such solid backing. It would seem to indicate that Nebraskans want a learning institution the football fans can also be proud of — contrary rhetoric up to this point notwithstanding.

Sen. Donald Dworak of Columbus, who is a leader in challenging the committee proposal, said of the votes Wednesday: "This legislative body does not reflect the basic thinking of Nebraskans. They've had enough taxes and they've had enough government."

We're not sure what citizen resentment against bigger government, even if true, has to do with support for the university. At any rate, the issue should not be confused.

Nebraskans want a first class university and they can afford to have one. The committee proposals entail reasonable, not excessive, expenditures.

Thanks To Reagan

WASHINGTON — Most Democratic strategists and most political analysts wish Ronald Reagan would pull out of the race for the Republican nomination. They attribute this wish to "most Republicans," who are supposed to see the Reagan campaign — after five defeats — as "pointless."

The Reagan primary challenge — which is the strongest ever made against a sitting president in modern times — is far from pointless in the eyes of most Republicans. On the contrary, in terms of public policy and party strength, Reagan's remarkable effort is jabbing a hatpin into Democratic balloons.

Consider, first, what Reagan is doing for the nation: He has caused the interment of the long-dead remains of a policy of accommodation to the demands of the Soviet Union. When President Ford expunged the word "détente" from his official vocabulary during the Florida primary, the event was more seminal than semantic: A visible hardening has taken place in our foreign policy posture. Thanks to Reagan, Cuba was declared an "outlaw" by an administration that was anxious to re-establish relations with Castro only a year ago.

In domestic affairs, the Reagan challenge has made it politically unwise for Democrats to try to bust the Ford budget. Although the President's new political managers get the praise for his early primary wins, the credit belongs to men like Alan Greenspan and Arthur Burns, whose anti-inflation policies have been permitted to work.

Now consider what Reagan's challenge has done to Ford. He has transformed an accidental president into a credible presidential candidate. Thanks to Reagan, the President is now recognized as a candidate capable of getting votes outside Grand Rapids. Because many in the media want to see a conservative defeat, Ford — reviled only six months ago as a clumsy klutz and general dumbhead — is now seen as a shrewd politician and a popular winner.

Even more important for the President, the Reagan challenge has provided a shakedown cruise: For example, the charges against Bo Callaway, if sprung in late October, would have been blown up to scandalous proportions.

That's what Reagan has been doing for the nation and for the President; now, what has he been doing for the Republican Party?

He has made Republicans newsworthy, which they have not been since 1952. Were it not for Reagan, the only Republican news this year would be bi-weekly announcements and withdrawals of Nelson Rockefeller. If the Republican side were lifeless, the focus of media attention would be exclusively on Democrats, and all the credit for necessary changes in the Ford foreign policy could be claimed by the Democratic contenders.

Well and good, says the White House, but enough's enough; now we must think of Republican "party unity." That's silly; the time to close ranks behind whoever wins is when a contest enlists a great many more people in the ranks. No ideological schism exists between Ford and Reagan, as used to exist between Goldwater and Rockefeller. Party unity was the Republican need of the last decade, party revivification is this decade's requirement — and the Reagan challenge is the life of the party.

No wonder so many Democrats wish the Reagan campaign would fold up quickly. And no wonder Democrats are so unhappy with the positioning of Ford as center-right, where they want to be, and not far right, where they wish to portray their opposition. Reagan's primary presence continues to strengthen Ford's general-election chances.

Negatives? The common-situs picketing veto, which the President did to placate the far right, will mean that organized labor will work much harder for Democrats in the campaign. And, if Reagan loses, some diehards will refuse to follow him into the Ford parade. But the positives to the party and the nation of a continued Reagan candidacy far outweigh the negatives.

ANTHONY LEWIS

WASHINGTON — Fifty years ago Attorney General Harlan F. Stone said the Bureau of Investigation, as the FBI was then called, "is not concerned with political or other opinions of individuals. It is concerned only with their conduct, and then only with such conduct as is forbidden by the laws of the United States."

That principle, so essential for a federal police agency, has been dangerously violated in recent years. The FBI not only investigated individuals because of their lawful opinions, we have learned, but persecuted some because their opinions offended the FBI director. And all this went on without any effective restraint by the Justice Department, Congress or the courts.

From here on, such abuses will be much less likely. The reason is a series of guidelines laid down by the present attorney general, Edward H. Levi, to govern the work of the FBI — not only the guidelines themselves but the spirit that informs them. It seems right to note a genuinely reassuring development in Washington.

One exceptional aspect of these guidelines is that, instead of presenting Congress with the usual executive fait accompli, Levi actively consulted congressional committees in drawing them up. The version announced the other day was the 28th draft made by a Justice Department committee, and the final form reflected congressional suggestions made during the long process.

"He was very open about it," one experienced and often skeptical congressional staff expert remarked. "There was no attempt to slip things past us."

Today's Mail

Not Ever Above The Law

ATTORNEY GENERAL LEVI ... lays down new guidelines ...

The biggest change was made in the draft of guidelines for domestic security investigations. The final version omitted a section allowing "preventive action" by the FBI to stop anticipated violence threatening "life or property." Although the early draft had tried to put careful restrictions on such action, congressmen continued to fear that the rules might allow blackmail or other disruptive tactics used in J. Edgar Hoover's Cointel Program.

The final Levi rules for domestic security neither allow nor prohibit

"preventive action." That continues to trouble some who would like a flat ban. But there is a fundamental safeguard in the Levi guidelines in this area. The FBI is to work on domestic security matters not at large but for purposes of law-enforcement. Levi testified, in language reminiscent of Stones:

"The purpose of the investigation must be the detection of unlawful conduct and not merely the monitoring of disfavored or troublesome activities and surely not of unpopular views."

That principle would exclude such things as the most notorious of Hoover abuses, the wiretapping and harassment of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. The Levi guidelines in fact put special restraints on taps and other intrusive investigative techniques.

Electronic surveillance, mail covers and infiltrated informants are barred altogether in preliminary security investigations. They can be used only in so-called "full investigations," which have to be approved by headquarters on a strict showing of possible crimes involving force or violence and must be reported to the attorney general within a week.

The rules also prohibit use of planted informants after someone has been charged with a crime, or to obtain "privileged information." These restrictions are designed to prevent, for example, an informant's listening to a defendant's talks with his lawyer — a practice attributed to the government in one political prosecution of the Nixon era.

Guidelines have been approved or are being drafted in a half-dozen areas of FBI work apart from domestic security. One, for example, is personnel investigations for the White House — where some of the Nixon abuses came.

One approved guideline says that field investigations of potential appointees shall be made only when requested by the president or a handful of his top aides, and only when the prospective appointee himself has consented. These provisions would prevent such an episode as the FBI investigation of Daniel Schorr that the Nixon White House ordered for purposes of intimidation and then explained, falsely, as related to an appointment for Schorr.

Of course, the best internal guidelines can be avoided, or changed by future officials. But Levi has urged Congress to write some rules into statutes, and he is about to call for a new law restricting electronic surveillance in security cases. Most important, he has introduced a new mood in which the FBI expects and has begun to accept scrutiny by the Justice Department and Congress.

In this performance, Edward Levi has justified the hopes placed in him when he took office last year. I have been critical of him for taking too favorable a view, as I felt, of executive privilege and secrecy in foreign affairs. Perhaps in those matters he has a certain respect for "experts" that he would not in his own domain of domestic law. In both areas it is important, as Harlan Stone said, that agents of the American government be "not above the law."

Electric, Water Rates Protested

Money In Whose Bank?

I'm writing about something we have all suffered in silence for months now. I am driven to write by a piece of propaganda sent to me in my Lincoln Electric System bill. It tells of the great money-saving possibilities in conserving energy.

I pulled out my old electric bills and found that I am now using 10% less electricity than at this time last year. I have been rewarded for this conservation by a 31% increase in my bill.

I object not only to the increase but to the use of my money to print this rot. I followed their energy-saving tips and, sure enough, just as the pamphlet said, it led to "money in the bank."

Unfortunately the money is in their account. DONOVAN KETZLER, JR.

Letter To Korea

We have sent the following letter to President Park Chung Mee, Seoul, Korea:

"The Board of Lincoln Church Women United (Lincoln, Nebraska, U.S.A.) is deeply distressed by the March 1 arrest of Miss Oo Chung Lee, president of Church Women United in Korea, following her participation in an ecumenical service at a Roman Catholic Church celebrating Korean independence.

"Many of our sons and husbands fought alongside South Koreans against the Communist North because we oppose the communist practice of arresting and imprisoning people who express dissent.

"Now we find that your government is adopting that same practice.

"We feel great shock that any government should so violate human rights and we protest your arrest of Miss Lee and others like her who are showing their concern for the poor and oppressed."

Copies of this letter have also gone to Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Rep. Charles Thone.

Ponders Words Against Deeds

The time to tell it like it is has arrived. During the last city election, all candidates for city office, including Helen Boosalis and Sam Schwartzkopf, were opposed to the Northeast Radial when they appeared before the Clinton Neighborhood Organization. Helen was also opposed to four-lane streets which destroy the character of neighborhoods.

Almost all the people on Fremont Street believed Helen and we worked hard for her election. I found a few people north and south of Fremont Street who thought she would change her mind after the election.

Now — what is the record today? She supports plans for a modified ground-level Northeast Radial which would terminate at 48th and Fremont Streets. From 48th Street, the plan calls for a four-lane street on Fremont Street to 56th Street. I now ponder her words against her deeds and come up with the sad conclusion that we are left holding the sack.

There can be no misunderstanding what the people want. We made that very clear in our letters to the Public Works Department and when we appeared before the City Council. The people voted for a new deal. They got the old deal trimmed with lace.

Era Of The Train

To me, there was something romantic about a train as it came chugging around the mountains to the western plains, through the valley, uphill and down again. It stopped at the way station for water and fuel. The conductor would go through the cars, shouting the next stop, and take the tickets. Before the stop, he would alert the passengers to be ready. Out on the platform, he would swing his little red lantern, always trimmed and ready.

The building of the railroads was hard work and only hardy men not afraid of work signed up. The trains were a Godsend for the people traveling, and for bringing in the mail and provisions to places far from the railroads.

Before the trains, there was the pony express, with riders ever so many miles. There would be stations along the way, with fresh horses and riders to make time as they traveled across the Midwest bringing the mail. There were freight trains to carry cattle and other cars for other needed commodities. Until trucks and family cars came, trains were big business, but now it is pretty slow.

The engineer at the throttle and the brakeman swinging his lantern, shouting, "All aboard! Step lively!" are almost a thing of the past.

Water Rate Increases

Good reporting on the recent hearing on water and sewer rates! The headline, "Water Rates To Be Studied Reluctantly," conveyed the obvious attitude of the Water and Sewer Advisory Board.

It became clear at the hearing that the water system business manager and some of the Advisory Board members want to continue the present rate structure with little modification. Only one other area of our entire nation has such a rate structure — a county adjacent to Washington, D.C. Is our situation this critical? If so, why?

Do most Lincoln residents really approve of the present rates? This impression was given, inasmuch as "only 3.4% of customers complained" in a two-month period.

Why do the system and board want to continue to penalize those who enlarge gardens, have larger families, or move into new homes or formerly vacant housing, while favoring those with water-cooled air-conditioning systems?

Why are some industries, such as Goodyear, permitted to get water way below average costs, with a base rate of 14 cents per unit?

Why penalize residents to build increased facilities principally for industries whose use of water and sewers is much greater? Can we be sure that the desired additional revenue will be used only for announced purposes?

One wonders if the Advisory Board is realistically representing most Lincoln residents. Why must we have continually higher water and sewer charges?

Another hearing is scheduled for Wednesday, March 24, at 3:00 p.m. in the City Council chambers. Are we prepared to pay constantly increasing unequal rates for years to come? Obviously, the time to voice complaints and to press for equitable water rates is now!

I would like to reply to The Star editorial of March 13, "The Malpractice Muddle." I am distressed that a publication as reputable as The Lincoln Star would editorialize on a legislative subject which has not been thoroughly researched or understood.

The editorial stated that insurance costs would not be helped by passage of LB 703. This is incorrect. As proposed, LB 703 would create an excess liability fund which would be funded by health care providers. This fund would pay any judgment over $100,000. This in itself would eliminate the need for health care providers to buy excess liability policies above this amount. As the cost of the basic $100,000 policy goes up today, so does the excess liability policy cost.

Also stated was the concern that patient rights were being legislated away. How untrue. Any citizen would still retain the right to have his case heard by a jury of his peers. The review panel as originally proposed would give an opinion only as to just grounds for a suit. If the panel found in favor of the plaintiff, expert testimony would be available. Should the panel find against the plaintiff and trial ensues and the plaintiff loses, the plaintiff assumes the health care providers' cost of defense. Is this not just? Limits of liability are already found in our laws. Workman's compensation is one and the guest statute dealing with automobiles even forbids suits, except in the case of gross negligence. Sen. John Cavanaugh used the example of a man's earning $40,000 a year, being able to collect only $500,000 of his life's projected earnings. Five hundred thousand dollars invested at 10% results in an annual income of $50,000 for life, plus a half-million-dollar estate!

Sen. Cavanaugh was quoted as saying that "this bill was bought and paid for." The Lincoln Star seems to concur. I am surprised that he and this publication think so little of the integrity of our state's Unicameral members. I hope that at no time and on no subject can any of its members be "bought and paid for." The Nebraska Association of Nurse Anesthetists has been lobbying for six weeks for passage of LB 703 and our only expense has been in time and energy.

The editorial gives the impression that LB 703 is only a physicians' interest bill. The provisions of LB 703 would help decrease the cost of providing medical care by physicians, hospitals and their employees and nurse anesthetists. As the cost of malpractice insurance increases, the cost of medical care increases and every person with medical insurance ends up paying for it with increased premiums. Presently, if malpractice insurance becomes unavailable, medical care becomes unavailable. If the cost continues to increase, it may become less expensive and more expedient to go for health care to neighboring states such as South Dakota, which has already passed similar legislation.

Flu Past Peak In Lincoln Area

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

It seems that nearly everyone in Lincoln is just getting, still has or has just recovered from the flu.

But according to the State Department of Health, the spread of Type A Victoria influenza, which originated in Victoria, Australia, has already reached its peak and is now on the "downslide" in the Lincoln area.

One Lincoln industry still reported "a fairly high absentee rate, not all from flu," but several other businesses contacted indicated that the worst is over and absenteeism has returned to its normal level.

Mrs. Helen Weber, Lincoln Public Schools health services supervisor, said, "We aren't seeing a problem. Only three schools reported 10% absenteeism Monday, but that may have been because of the bad weather."

Phase Two

What many people are experiencing now, said Dr. Paul Stoesz, head of the health department's disease control division, is phase two of the viral infection — flu complications.

Although the flu virus itself presents no real hazard to most people, he said, "it can be the straw that breaks the camel's back" for those who are either very young or very old and are suffering from other health problems. And for these people "antibiotics have no particular effects."

However, "we are on the last leg of the virus phase," he said.

Two Weeks Later

Flu complications usually follow two weeks after the initial infection, Stoesz explained. These flu complications consist of upper respiratory problems, such as pneumonia, or other ailments, such as urinary infections.

Flu complications may be partly responsible for the recent increase in hospital admissions.

Economic Data Show Nebraska Improving

Nebraska's economic situation showed some improvement in November, the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Bureau of Business Research reported Thursday.

Both dollar and physical volume in the state indicated a gradual improvement, according to the bureau.

Production figures in November were about one percentage point above the October mark.

Agricultural activity continued to hold up in November, the bureau said, being somewhat ahead of the same month in 1974 and at a level only slightly lower than in October, the study revealed.

Data also indicated there has been a marked surge in motor vehicle sales in Nebraska, beginning in September. Without adjusting for price changes, the dollar volume of motor vehicles for the state for the months of September, October and November combined was 17% above that of the same period in 1974, the bureau said.

In the city business indexes in the chart, the same cities have tended to be at the top for several months, it was pointed out.

Kearney, Nebraska City and Beatrice are among these leaders, but Holdrege has dropped from fourth place to last place, mostly because of its low banking activity, the bureau commented.

Net taxable retail sales in Nebraska regions and cities (adjusted for price changes are:

Detoxification Center To Open On April 19, LCAD Board Told

Barring any new hitches, the long-awaited City Detoxification Center will begin receiving patients April 19, the Lincoln Council on Alcoholism and Drugs (LCAD) board was told Thursday.

The center, an alternative to jail for the public intoxicant, will provide supervised care for those in need of drying out.

An open house is tentatively scheduled for April 17. It will be cosponsored by LCAD and the City-County Health Department which recently has been placed in administrative control of the new city project.

The center is located in the former Lincoln General Hospital intern quarters.

The Rev. Rex Bevins, LCAD president, announced that the agency's executive committee has written a letter to Health Department Director Dr. Ed Lyman in support of hiring of Dona Giles as Detox Center director.

For the past year, Mrs. Giles has been director of the proposed Detox Center. Her salary has been paid by the city through a grant to LCAD.

Since administration of the center has been transferred to the Health Department, the director's position is considered a new one for which Mrs. Giles must apply.

The board also belatedly approved an LCAD application for a $4,000 state mental health grant to start a media center for the community awareness program.

In other action:

— The board approved the nomination of Carol Eggland and Marsha Shada to the board. Ms. Eggland is chairman of LCAD's new Prevention, Education, Legislation Planning Committee. Ms. Shada is chairman of LCAD's Drug Treatment Planning Committee.

— The Rev. Mr. Bevins announced the appointment of four at-large members to the LCAD executive committee. They are Bill Cooley, Ralph Fox, John R. Doyle and former LCAD president Don Nielsen.

— It was announced that Full Circle has received certification by the Nebraska Commission on Drugs.

— The board approved a finance committee recommendation that finance statements be submitted to the full board quarterly rather than monthly.

Region XII Commission Plans Anti-Crime Force

Central City (UPI) — The four-county Region XII Crime Commission has decided to study the possibility of implementing a major crime prevention unit designed to deter crime.

At a meeting Wednesday night, the commission approved sending Tom Smaha, Grand Island police chief, and Bob Harness, commission consultant, to Moline, Ill., to observe how such a unit works.

The Region XII unit would cost $114,000 to implement and was listed as the commission's no. 1 priority. A crime prevention task force would inspect businesses and homes, distribute literature, hold seminars and utilize other methods designed to reduce crime and make persons aware of law enforcement activities.

Officials said 90% of the $114,000 would come from the federal government, 5% from the state and 5% from Hall, Hamilton, Howard and Merrick Counties, the four counties in Region XII.

Officials said they hoped to implement the unit during the fiscal year that starts Oct. 1.

Firemen Overcome By Chemical Fumes

Grain-ton (AP) — A fire of undetermined origin destroyed a shed near the Rickles Elevator Thursday morning.

The shed contained farm chemicals, and at least two firemen were hospitalized after being overcome by the fumes from the chemical blaze.

The two firemen were identified as Mark Franklin and Wallace Fire Chief Gary Ott. The two were overcome when they went near the flaming building without respirators. Both men were taken to a Grant hospital, but were not believed to be seriously ill. No other injuries were reported.

About 10 families in the southern portion of this tiny southeastern Perkins County community were forced to evacuate their homes.

The fire was reported about 6:45 a.m., and firemen from Wallace and Elsie aided Grain-ton volunteers in trying to douse the flames. The fire was declared under control about 10:30 a.m.

Fumes and dense smoke, which hampered firemen, drifted as far as Hayes Center, about 35 miles southeast of here.

Ford To Name Omaha Native As Ambassador

Washington (AP) — President Ford said he would nominate Omaha native David Smith, 58, to be ambassador to Sweden.

Smith, who served as assistant secretary of the Air Force for manpower and personnel during the Eisenhower administration, currently is a Washington attorney.

He also has been dean of the graduate school of international affairs at Columbia University.

Flu Past Peak In Lincoln Area

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

It seems that nearly everyone in Lincoln is just getting, still has or has just recovered from the flu.

But according to the State Department of Health, the spread of Type A Victoria influenza, which originated in Victoria, Australia, has already reached its peak and is now on the "downside" in the Lincoln area.

One Lincoln industry still reported "a fairly high absentee rate, not all from flu," but several other businesses contacted indicated that the worst is over and absenteeism has returned to its normal level.

Mrs. Helen Weber, Lincoln Public Schools health services supervisor, said, "We aren't seeing a problem. Only three schools reported 10% absenteeism Monday, but that may have been because of the bad weather."

Phase Two

What many people are experiencing now, said Dr. Paul Stoesz, head of the health department's disease control division, is phase two of the viral infection — flu complications.

Although the flu virus itself presents no real hazard to most people, he said, "it can be the straw that breaks the camel's back" for those who are either very young or very old and are suffering from other health problems. And for these people "antibiotics have no particular effects."

However, "we are on the last leg of the virus phase," he said.

Two Weeks Later

Flu complications usually follow two weeks after the initial infection, Stoesz explained. These flu complications consist of upper respiratory problems, such as pneumonia, or other ailments, such as urinary infections.

Flu complications may be partly responsible for the recent increase in hospital admissions, Stoesz added, "but there is no concrete evidence" that this is true.

Three Lincoln hospitals have reported increases in admissions, but hospital spokesmen said most patients are in the hospitals for reasons other than the flu infection.

"We have had an increase in the number of elderly patients and these people are the most susceptible to the flu," said John Allen of St. Elizabeth Health Center.

Stoesz said no recent deaths can be specifically attributed to the virus.

Certificates Checked

Stoesz's division reviews all death certificates when a contagious disease is involved, but results are not available because of a two to four-week delay between the filing of the certificate and the time it reaches his office.

Even if a person displayed flu-like symptoms, flu cannot be said to be the cause of death if there is no laboratory "proof to back it," Mrs. Margaret Foyer said. She is with the Lancaster Health Department.

She added that those still apprehensive about contracting the influenza infection "should stay away from people with colds and stay away from crowds."

Above all, "people should practice good health" and not give up on flu shots.

"You hear so many people say, 'I got my flu shot and it still didn't help,'" she explained. "But this is a different strain" from the Port Chalmers flu of last year and the Asian flu bug which current vaccines are intended to combat.

However, "the U.S. Public Health Service in Atlanta is working on a vaccine for this strain (Type A Victoria) and other strains of influenza," she said.

Besides, the most anyone can expect from any vaccine is "90% protection," Mrs. Royer noted.

Economic Data Show Nebraska Improving

Nebraska's economic situation showed some improvement in November, the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Bureau of Business Research reported Thursday.

Both dollar and physical volume in the state indicated a gradual improvement, according to the bureau.

Production figures in November were about one percentage point above the October mark.

Agricultural activity continued to hold up in November, the bureau said, being somewhat ahead of the same month in 1974 and at a level only slightly lower than in October, the study revealed.

Data also indicated there has been a marked surge in motor vehicle sales in Nebraska, beginning in September. Without adjusting for price changes, the dollar volume of motor vehicles for the state for the months of September, October and November combined was 17% above that of the same period in 1974, the bureau said.

In the city business indexes in the chart, the same cities have tended to be at the top for several months, it was pointed out.

Kearney, Nebraska City and Beatrice are among these leaders, but Holdrege has dropped from fourth place to last place, mostly because of its low banking activity, the bureau commented.

Net taxable retail sales in Nebraska regions and cities (adjusted for price changes are:

Detoxification Center To Open On April 19, LCAD Board Told

Barring any new hitches, the long-awaited city Detoxification Center will begin receiving patients April 19, the Lincoln Council on Alcoholism and Drugs (LCAD) board was told Thursday.

The center, an alternative to jail for the public intoxicant, will provide supervised care for those in need of drying out.

An open house is tentatively scheduled for April 17. It will be sponsored by LCAD and the City-County Health Department which recently has been placed in administrative control of the new city project.

The center is located in the former Lincoln General Hospital intern quarters.

The Rev. Rex Bevins, LCAD president, announced that the agency's executive committee has written a letter to Health Department Director Dr. Ed Lyman in support of hiring of Dona Giles as Detox Center director.

For the past year, Mrs. Giles has been director of the proposed Detox Center. Her salary has been paid by the city through a grant to LCAD.

Since administration of the center has been transferred to the Health Department, the director's position is considered a new one for which Mrs. Giles must apply.

The board also belatedly approved an LCAD application for a $4,000 state mental health grant to start a media center for the community awareness program.

In other action: — The board approved the nomination of Carol Eggland and Marsha Shada to the board. Ms. Eggland is chairman of

The shed contained farm chemicals, and at least two firemen were hospitalized after being overcome by the fumes from the chemical blaze.

Fumes and dense smoke, which hampered firemen, drifted as far as Hayes Center, about 35 miles southeast of here.

The two firemen were identified as Mark Franklin and Wallace Fire Chief Gary Ott. The two were overcome when they went near the flaming building without respirators. Both men were taken to a Grant hospital, but were not believed to be seriously ill. No other injuries were reported.

About 10 families in the southern portion of this tiny southeastern Perkins County community were forced to evacuate their homes.

LES Sells Bonds Worth $48 Million

The largest bond sale in Lincoln's history was completed Thursday when the Lincoln Electric System sold $48 million in electric revenue bonds to a New York City investment banking firm.

Lehman Brothers, Inc., purchased the bonds for an average interest rate of 7.326%. Finance Director Jim Mallon said he believes Lehman Brothers' offer was a good one and gave final approval to the bond sale.

LES sold $15.3 million in power supply bonds and another $32.7 million in distribution facilities bonds. The bond sale was the largest in the city's history.

It will help pave the way for a number of LES improvements, return $25 million in short-term bond anticipation notes and help pay Lincoln's share for construction of the Laramie River Station in Wyoming.

In addition to the $48 million in bonds sold Thursday, LES had bonded indebtedness of $8.8 million.

Thursday's bond sale is the first major step in Lincoln's 10-year program in which $337 million worth of bonds will be sold.

The Laramie River project will consume most of the bill

LES's share will cost about $160 million, or 13.3% of the total project. LES plans to market $10 million in short-term notes for the project this year.

The Laramie River Station will be built near Wheatland, Wyo., and will be a coal-fired, steam-electric generating station. Five other utility groups are participating in the plant.

During the next 10 years, LES will sell another $32 million for other power plants and $145 million for distribution equipment.

LES Administrative Board members said they were pleased with the interest rate on the bonds sold Thursday.

George Ragsdale of Lehman Brothers reported that over a 35-year period Lincoln will pay $85.7 million in interest on those bonds. That's several million dollars less in interest payments than LES had calculated.

Ragsdale recommended that the Chase Manhattan Bank in New York City and the Northern Trust Co. in Chicago be the paying agents for the bonds.

LES Board member Vince Goeres, head of the LES finance committee, said Lehman Brothers' offer appeared to be a good bid.

"It's good for LES and good for the buyer," Goeres said.

Bus Rides Free For April 24 Art Festival

Lincolnlites can ride the Lincoln Transportation System buses for nothing on Saturday, April 24th.

The Downtown Lincoln Promotion Council (DLPC) and the Ride & Shop program will pay LTS $800 to provide free bus service to attract people to attend an arts festival on April 24th.

DLPC Director Lanny Jorgenson told the LTS Board Thursday that the festival will be held two days on the 15th St. Mall from O St. to the State Capitol Building.

City Finance Director Jim Mallon said the city doesn't lose any money on the deal and gains riders by such a promotion.

The LTS Board also noted it has agreed to put all buses traveling to the downtown area on an expanded loop system this summer if the city agrees not to close down the 14th and O St. intersection for construction. Originally the LTS Board said it would probably have to wait several years before putting buses on the loop, covering 11th, 14th J and Q St. because the intersection would be torn up.

Mayor Helen Boosalis said

Wednesday, however, that she has recommended a portion of the intersection remain open to traffic so the buses can travel on the loop.

Board members want to switch to the loop system because they believe it will provide better service to the university campus, the State Capitol Building and the new Federal Building.

Business Suit Ruling Precedent

By United Press International
The State Supreme Court, setting a new precedent in business disputes Thursday ruled business records introduced as evidence in a trial need not be backed by the testimony of those who actually prepared the records.

In so ruling the high court ordered a new trial for Maurice Hyatt of Omaha sued by Bobbie Brooks Inc. for return of $6,753 that computer records said he owed for unreturned samples. The Douglas County District Court had ruled in Hyatt's favor.

The court said it adopted the precedent based on rulings in other jurisdictions citing the Missouri Supreme Court as one of them.

Hyatt was a salesman for Stacy Ames Inc., a women's clothing firm which was taken over by Bobbie Brooks after Hyatt quit in 1969.

Bobbie Brooks officials learned of the computer record of unreturned samples and filed suit to recover. The district court rejected the computer record as evidence on the grounds the man in charge of it for Bobbie Brooks was not employed by Stacy Ames when those records were compiled.

The firm appealed.

The Supreme Court said in a new trial in Hyatt's case and in future cases like it such records can be introduced as evidence without the testimony of the preparer as long as the custodian at the time of trial can show he understands the information.

To hold otherwise would fail to recognize the realities of business and would exclude a great amount of reliable evidence concerning the activities of large business organizations, the court said.

In other cases the Supreme Court —Reversed and ordered a new trial in a just dispute filed in the Douglas County District Court by Hugh Campbell against Francis Kirby.

—Affirmed the Saline County District Court's decision in favor of Lauchlin Graham Co. in a promissory note dispute filed by the Crete State Bank.

—Affirmed the Douglas County District Court's decision in favor of Raymond Robinson in a personal injury suit filed by Esther Laux.

—Affirmed the Buffalo County District Court's decision in favor of State Farm Mutual in an insurance coverage dispute filed by Susan Emery.

Senators Rewrite Liquor Legislation

By The Associated Press
Conditions governing distribution methods under which Coors beer might be sold in Nebraska became the focal point of debate Thursday on a multi-faceted liquor bill rewritten on the unicameral floor.

The bill as rewritten deals with various liquor matters including:

—The requirement that territories for beer distribution be designated on each distributor's license.

—Authority for certain restaurants to serve wine as well as beer on Sunday.

—Issuance of joint tenancy liquor licenses to husband-wife teams who qualify so rights of survivorship would allow continuation of business.

—Authorization for the State Fair Board to have a liquor license.

Neligh Sen. John DeCamp won adoption of the amendments on all but the Sunday wine sale issue which was backed by Omaha Sen. John Cavanaugh with an assist from Blair Sen. Walter George.

The Irishman and the German teamed up to aid another ethnic group with George saving in his German accent. There are a number of Italian restaurants in Omaha and beer is just the wrong kind of beverage for their food.

It was the Coors beer issue that created the most controversy in debate however. Ralston Sen. Gerald Koch tried unsuccessfully to strike the distributorship portion of the bill saying it would set up fiefdoms for certain people hoping to get Coors distribution rights.

Koch said he is certain Coors will come into the state by August. If the law remained unchanged he said the Coors brewery based in Golden Colo. would market the beer on its own because beer distributorships could overlap.

The name of lobbyist David Tews a Lincoln attorney surfaced as Koch questioned Scottsbluff Sen. William Nichol which prompted Koch to say:

We are trying to make sure certain people get certain benefits. He said later to a reporter that the DeCamp language on distribution would create restraint of trade and monopolies.

He estimated during floor debate that 2,000 applications are on hand with Coors for beer distributorships in Nebraska.

DeCamp countered that the law on beer distribution territories is unclear. He said it was originally set up to establish territories but the territories were never defined.

Koch's attempt to strike the DeCamp language failed on a 16-27 vote. The rewritten liquor bill was moved into position for final passage in the next few days.

Vet School Decision Delayed By Unicam

By United Press International
Nebraska lawmakers Thursday agreed to delay a decision for at least a day on whether to go on record in support of an Old West Regional Commission proposal to build a $14 million school of veterinary medicine.

The school would serve the commission's five member states of Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Wyoming and Montana.

Sen. George Burrows of Adams offered a resolution asking Gov. J. James Exon to proceed with the idea. But lawmakers decided to hold the resolution until Friday for a final decision.

Exon who came up with the idea of a regional school two years ago has asked the Unicameral for a resolution on the issue before the commission's April meeting. The commission is scheduled to decide then whether to spend $467,000 on preliminary planning for the school.

"I cannot support the resolution," said Aurora Sen. Maurice Kremer. But neither can I say "forget it."

Kremer and others said they needed more information. In response Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly offered amendments to the resolution which asked for additional need projections and an indication from the other states on their feelings.

Sen. Ralph Kelly of Grand Island said he initially supported the idea when it was brought up last year. But I've cooled a bit since then. He said. I think we should back off entirely and instead worry about getting more physicians in rural areas.

Sen. Loran Schmitt of Bellwood Agriculture Committee chairman, agreed it wasn't time to scrap the idea. He said instead it was time to take a good look at it and said the commission's consultant on the project has agreed to make another visit to Nebraska to meet with his committee.

Dr. Clarence Cole, former dean of veterinary medicine at Ohio State, was hired by the commission to study the proposal and last week was in Nebraska to explain his recommendation that the project should proceed. He also has recommended Nebraska as the site for the school.

"None of the commission states now has a school and each must contract with other states to educate their students. The Unicameral this session appropriated money to expand those training contracts to include Cornell University and the University of Pennsylvania."

Board To Review Mental Patients OK'd By Senators

State senators Thursday voted 26-0 to have a six-month review of all cases involving people previously committed to state mental health facilities and still institutionalized.

The plan for a three-member state board appointed by the governor was in a lengthy amendment to LB806, the bill outlining mental health commitment procedures.

After the amendment was adopted, the legislation won easy voice — vote advancement.

Resolution Calls For Fee Study At Med Center

Two state senators Thursday introduced a resolution in the Unicameral calling for a study on professional fees earned by University of Nebraska Medical Center faculty members.

The resolution calling for a study by the Unicameral's executive board was introduced by Sens. Robert Clark of Sidney and Richard Lewis of Holbrook. If approved, a report on findings would be filed with the lawmakers next year.

Clark said the resolution was prompted by news stories which said medical center faculty members were not filing reports on professional fees earned in addition to state salaries.

Senators Rewrite Liquor Legislation

By The Associated Press
Conditions governing distribution methods under which Coors beer might be sold in Nebraska became the focal point of debate Thursday on a multi-faceted liquor bill rewritten on the Unicameral floor.

The bill as rewritten deals with various liquor matters, including:

—The requirement that territories for beer distribution be designated on each distributor's license.

—Authority for certain restaurants to serve wine as well as beer on Sunday.

—Issuance of joint tenancy liquor licenses to husband-wife teams who qualify so rights of survivorship would allow continuation of business.

—Authorization for the State Fair Board to have a liquor license.

Neligh Sen. John DeCamp won adoption of the amendments on all but the Sunday wine sale issue, which was backed by Omaha Sen. John Cavanaugh with an assist from Blair Sen. Walter George.

The Irishman and the German teamed up to aid another ethnic group with George saying in his German accent: "There are a number of Italian restaurants in Omaha and beer is just the wrong kind of beverage for their food."

It was the Coors beer issue

that created the most controversy in debate, however.

Ralston Sen. Gerald Koch tried unsuccessfully to strike the distributorship portion of the bill, saying it would set up "fiefdoms" for certain people hoping to get Coors distribution rights.

Koch said he is certain Coors will come into the state by August. If the law remained unchanged, he said, the Coors brewery based in Golden, Colo., would market the beer on its own because beer distributorships could overlap.

The name of lobbyist David Tews, a Lincoln attorney, surfaced as Koch questioned Scottsbluff Sen. William Nichol, which prompted Koch to say:

"We are trying to make sure certain people get certain benefits." He said later to a reporter that the DeCamp language on distribution would create restraint of trade and monopolies.

He estimated during floor debate that 2,000 applications are on hand with Coors for beer distributorships in Nebraska.

DeCamp countered that the law on beer distribution territories is unclear. He said it was originally set up to establish territories, but the territories were never defined.

Koch's attempt to strike the DeCamp language failed on a 16-27 vote. The rewritten liquor bill was moved into position for final passage in the next few days.

Malpractice Bill End Run Planned

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

His medical malpractice bill blocked at first stage floor consideration by lengthy budget debates, Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood Thursday prepared a parliamentary maneuver to leap the pile of appropriations measures.

Schmit has revised the malpractice proposal contained in LB703 and hopes on Friday to find the 25 votes required to give it new life.

"I'm boxed in, so I've got to try an end run," he told newsmen. But Schmit declined to divulge the details of his plan.

All he would say is that it "would allow consideration of the bill earlier than ordinarily would be the case if 25 people agree."

Schmit has already tried in vain to move LB703 ahead of the budget bills at first stage floor consideration for renewed debate.

The only other option available would appear to be a move to gut another bill which has already reached second stage consideration and replace it with his revised version of the malpractice proposal.

Schmit said he has revised his bill so it is "a reasonable plan we can all live with."

No longer, he said, can opponents say that it is "weighted toward the doctors."

Schmit's amendments would liberalize the statute of limitations provisions in his plan and wipe out the proposed board of arbitration which had stood as a procedural step delaying litigation.

The latter amendment would allow for speedier trial. Schmit's statute of limitations revision would return to the proposal earlier recommended by the Public Health and Welfare Committee which basically allows for claims within two years of occurrence or one year of discovery, except no action could be commenced more than eight years after occurrence. There are exceptions in the case of minors.

Other revisions will also be proposed to make the bill more acceptable to its opponents, he said.

Schmit said his revisions make no changes in the already amended definition of damages which may be recovered, or in the $500,000 limit on recovery.

His revisions have been discussed with the bill's legislative opponents, and "they're looking at them," Schmit said.

Unicam Okays State Pay Hike

The Legislature voted 26-0 second-round approval to a bill Thursday to raise the minimum wage for state employees from $2.37 to $2.60 per hour.

Lincoln Sen. Steve Fowler allowed the bill to be amended so that it would only affect employees at the bottom of the state pay scale.

Omaha Sen. Glenn Goodrich said the bill, LB176, would cost the state $25,000 per year.

Possible Leads Develop In Ron Abboud Slaying

Omaha (UPI) — The Douglas County Sheriff's Department indicated Thursday some possible leads have developed into the 1975 slaying of an Omaha realtor.

The comment by a sheriff's department spokesman came on the heels of a $25,000 reward offered for leads to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the death of Ronald J. Abboud, 40.

William J. Lindsay, an attorney connected with the reward offer, said it was established by "friends, acquaintances and relatives" of Abboud. Abboud's family filed a missing persons report to the Omaha Police Division Oct. 29, and his body, containing several gunshot wounds, was discovered Sunday Nov. 2 along a creekbed in suburban southwest Omaha.

The sheriff's spokesman said the Abboud slaying was under "active investigation."

He said an officer has returned from Phoenix, Ariz., where he checked out a "possible lead" and was in the process of compiling information learned on the trip.

"This is still a very active investigation," the spokesman said. "As to what information we have, the situation is such at this time we can't comment on it."

Prior to finding Abboud's body, his abandoned car was located at the Westroads Shopping Center in Omaha.

No suspects have been arrested in the case.

"We would hope with the size of the reward now being offered," the sheriff's spokesman said, "and with the intensive investigation we have conducted, there will be some significant developments forthcoming."

Jury: Brothers Innocent Of Officer Assault Charge

Alliance (AP) — After nearly a day of deliberations, a Box Butte County District Court jury Thursday returned innocent verdicts in the cases of two brothers charged with assaulting an Alliance police officer.

The two defendants, Steven and Douglas Crouse, who ranch about 20 miles south of here, were charged in connection with an incident last November in front of the American Legion Hall here.

Resource Firm Moving Offices

New York (AP) — Texas-gulf Inc., a large natural resources company, is moving its corporate headquarters from midtown Manhattan to Connecticut, a spokesman said.

He said the company was looking for existing office space in the Greenwich-Stamford area of southern Connecticut, although no decision has been made on a site.

The two allegedly attacked officer Lance Jordan after he had arrested a Keystone man for driving while intoxicated.

Jordan suffered a head cut, and said the two defendants had knocked him to the ground and beat his head on the street.

The trial, which began Monday before Judge Robert Moran, went to the jury late Wednesday afternoon, after the Crouse brothers and a long string of other defense witnesses claimed that neither of the defendants acted aggressively against Jordan or struck him.

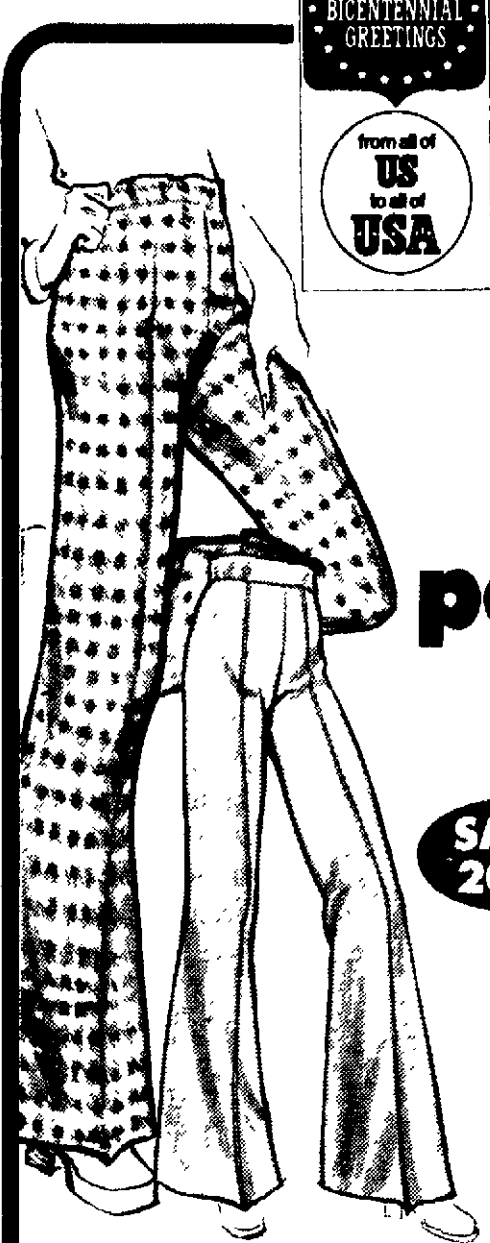

The verdict in Steven Crouse's case was returned about 3:30 p.m., Thursday, with the jury foreman telling Moran that the panel could not agree in the case of brother Douglas. Moran instructed the jury to go back and reread his instructions, and to try and come up with a verdict.

The jury retired again, and about 20 minutes later returned the innocent verdict in Douglas Crouse's case.

Malpractice Bill End Run Planned

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

His medical malpractice bill blocked at first stage floor consideration by lengthy budget debates, Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood Thursday prepared a parliamentary maneuver to leap the pile of appropriations measures.

Schmit has revised the malpractice proposal contained in LB703 and hopes on Friday to find the 25 votes required to give it new life.

"I'm boxed in, so I've got to try an end run," he told newsmen. But Schmit declined to divulge the details of his plan.

All he would say is that it "would allow consideration of the bill earlier than ordinarily would be the case if 25 people agree."

Schmit has already tried in vain to move LB703 ahead of the budget bills at first stage floor consideration for renewed debate.

The only other option available would appear to be a move to gut another bill which has already reached second stage consideration and replace it with his revised version of the malpractice proposal.

Schmit said he has revised his bill so it is "a reasonable plan we can all live with."

No longer, he said, can opponents say that it is "weighted toward the doctors."

Chef Builds With Sugar

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

John Aguilar's sculptured city hall looks good enough to eat. And it is — if you've got a sweet tooth extraordinaire.

There are 150 pounds of sugar in Aguilar's whimsical model of a Southern building as he conceived it might have stood some 200 years ago.

The framework of the two-story plus tower building is a gum paste base (powdered sugar, egg white, lemon juice and cream of tartar).

Using cardboard patterns he'd carefully drawn up, Aguilar duplicated the designs in the rolled-out gum paste, cutting away the open window spaces while the sugar was still soft. Then each of the pieces was left to dry for three to four months.

The "glue" that holds the delicate structure together is simply a powdered sugar and egg white mixture royal icing.

Chief chef at the Lincoln Hilton Hotel, Aguilar spent some six months on the project in his off-duty hours.

But the chef's diligence was rewarded with a first place ribbon in the sugar category of the culinary arts competition at the 1976 Midlands Regional Restaurant Food and Equipment Show in Lincoln last weekend.

Aguilar is quick to point out that sugar sculpture takes a lot of patience. "If you break a piece, you don't get disgusted — you just start all over again."

Aguilar made duplicates of especially delicate pieces from the start so he wouldn't have to wait out the several month drying process all over again if something broke.

Contrasting the whiteness of the light and airy model are the dark brown roof (painted with cocoa) and the green grass (shredded coconut tinted with green food coloring). Sugar cubes stack up for the chimney and enclosing fence.

The paintings on the pedestal are done in cocoa and are originals by Aguilar. One depicts a tobacco road scene of 1760, while another illustrates the Boston tea party.

Adorning a third side is an eagle emblem replica of white chocolate which, on its own, won a first place in the miscellaneous category in the culinary arts exhibition.

At 55 cents an ounce for the raw material, the 14-pound eagle is both costly and caloric.

Aguilar is hoping to take his winning display to a Midwest culinary arts competition in Chicago this May if he can figure out some way to transport the delicate confectionary creation.

PROF. MEIERHENRY . . . makes use of overhead projector, not yet invented when he started teaching course.

He's Taught Same Course 30 Years

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The man who has spent exactly half his life teaching the same course at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln says it has as much application, importance and excitement today as it first did in 1946.

Dr. Wesley C. Meierhenry pulled out his 30-year-old class records and the original, now-tattered lecture notes for what was Educational Administration 289, "The Organization and Administration of Audio-Visual Aids."

The word "aids" was provisionally penciled out, and "materials" placed above it. The chairman of the UNL Adult and Continuing Education Department chuckled: "There was even that hassle then about what to call it."

Come September, that will finally be resolved. Now course No. 589, "Utilization and Evaluation of Audio-Visual Media," will drop the term "audio-visual."

Prof. Meierhenry's course has changed a lot more than its name over the years.

In 1946, "There was no such thing as audio tape," he said. The overhead projector would come later too. And television was a fledgling art.

First TV 'So Snowy'

Meierhenry recalled as a young teacher seeing the first TV commercial broadcast from Philadelphia to Atlantic City education conventioners. The image "was so snowy." The general consensus among the learned group: TV "was a nice idea, but it never would fly."

Meanwhile, he said, the "most exciting device" for his postwar course was a "microphone," which the NU speech department bought. The 150-pound machine was "the greatest thing" then, since it recorded voices — if only for two minutes before recycling.

Yet Meierhenry remembered he was so enthused about the microphone that he "loaded it into the berth of a train" and lugged it to Alliance to share with his first off-campus audio-visual students.

In those pre-McLuhan days before the use of the term "media," he noted, print was separated from audio-visual forms.

Science Teachers Assigned

Thus audio-visual equipment was generally assigned to science teachers, presumed "more expert" since they conducted experiments with physical contraptions.

Teaching about audio-visuals was limited to helping teachers learn to use the bulletin board, posters, conduct museum trips — "whatever was in their immediate environment," Meierhenry said.

One set of his notes allows "a whole session on (using) the chalk board." He said the chalk board's no less important today.

Even though tape recorders became fairly common by 1957, there still was "a lot of emphasis on still pictures, cartoons, all of the things that teachers could do inexpensively."

New Lectures Created

Meierhenry developed new lectures about radio, record players, tack and felt boards and study displays. "We were searching for ways" to present information that were eventually supplied by the overhead projector, he said.

Giant strides in technology have had an impact. "We are now getting students 21 to 23 years old who were reared on television and stereo. For the first time, I'm getting people in class whose life experience has been with media and technology, living it first-hand."

But, pressed to explain media power and use, they "couldn't articulate its meaning," he said.

"Even people who have grown up with it have never stopped to analyze why it has impact." And teachers "tell me they don't really understand it, either."

By the 1960s, he said, "I began to be aware of the fact that some learned best through print," excelling in verbal skills — the law, English, humanities. Others learned better from visual instruction, and tended to go into engineering, architecture, fine arts.

Support Found

"Only in the last few years," Meierhenry said, have educators found "physiological and psychological support" for best-suited uses of audio-visuals.

Asked what the future promises, Meierhenry unhesitatingly said, "We're going to keep moving more and more to individual and personal classroom use" of media.

As equipment becomes increasingly miniaturized and portable, that will answer teachers' "great need" to "have things right there when they need it." He predicted that new delivery systems, via cable for example, will expand today's media center to place information instantly in the classroom.

"Massive systems" now built up blandly for equal-broad audiences will be "adapted for use of individual youngsters," to suit each's learning ability.

For example Meierhenry said, TV dwells on distant "representations of reality." They're "so slick, so refined, so artificial." He foresees an "unusual attempt" to revive "first-hand experiences," the "primitive kinds of things we once knew and which are necessary for learning . . . not encoded by all this fancy stuff."

3,500 Students

Meierhenry estimates he's taught about 3,500 students in the span of the single course, after getting into audio-visuals by accident in 1946.

He was chosen to direct a research study, "Nebraska Program of Educational Enrichment Through the Use of Motion Pictures," supported by the Carnegie Foundation and others. That prompted him to "study seriously" the potential of audio-visuals.

The study mushroomed into "almost an evangelistic" commitment to expose teachers and administrators to "a whole other side of learning."

After 30 years, he is still at it.

Wife Intolerant Since She Quit

DEAR ABBY: When my wife asked me what I wanted for Christmas, I said, "You'd never give it to me, so forget it." She nagged me until I finally told her that I wanted a wife who didn't smoke.

She thought for a minute, then put out her cigarette and asked, "How long do I have to quit for?"

"Forever," I replied. "But if you quit for a year, I'll be satisfied." (She was a three-pack-a-day smoker.)

Well, she hasn't had a cigarette since, and I'm really happy because I know she's better off. But now she's giving everybody who smokes a hard time.

She's put all our ashtrays away, and if we have guests over who start to smoke, she says, "If you MUST smoke, please go outside!"

When we're out and people ask her if she minds if they smoke, she says, "Yes. I'm allergic."

I'm glad she quit smoking, but

LONG-SUFFERING HUSBAND

DEAR SUFFERING: Anyone who can quit cold turkey after having been a three-pack-a-day smoker deserves a hand. But she shouldn't give the back of her hand to others who have yet to recognize the hazards of their habit — or are unable (or unwilling) to give it up.

DEAR ABBY: The hostess who was upset by early arrivals is making mountains out of molehills. Some folks are compulsive early arrivers. I know. I'm married to one. If I could sell the time I've spent sitting around in airports because my wife didn't want to "miss the plane," I'd have a fortune.

But the solution to early arrivals for a party is simple: Point them toward the magazine rack or give them today's newspaper. Oh, and assign them the task of greeting other early arrivals. That way you very neatly get the whole problem off your hands.

UNRUFFLED BY EARLY BIRDS

DEAR UN: Thanks for making molehills out of mountains.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think about a person who would accept a lovely, hand-crocheted gift and then enter it in a handicraft show as her own creation? She even removed my "especially handmade" label from it.

HURT AND FURIOUS

DEAR HURT: She can't be playing with a full deck. Let her know that YOU know of her shenanigans.

Teaching about audio-visuals was limited to helping teachers learn to use the bulletin board, posters, conduct museum trips — "whatever was in their immediate environment," Meierhenry said.

One set of his notes allows "a whole session on (using) the chalk board." He said the chalk board's no less important today.

Even though tape recorders became fairly common by 1957, there still was "a lot of emphasis on still pictures, cartoons, all of the things that teachers could do inexpensively."

New Lectures Created

Meierhenry developed new lectures about radio, record players, tack and felt boards and study displays. "We were searching for ways" to present information that were eventually supplied by the overhead projector, he said.

Giant strides in technology have had an impact. "We are now getting students 21 to 23 years old who were reared on television and stereo. For the first time, I'm getting people in class whose life experience has been with media and technology, living it first-hand."

But, pressed to explain media power and use, they "couldn't articulate its meaning," he said.

"Even people who have grown up with it have never stopped to analyze why it has impact." And teachers "tell me they don't really understand it, either."

By the 1960s, he said, "I began to be aware of the fact that some learned best through print," excelling in verbal skills — the law, English, humanities. Others learned better from visual instruction, and tended to go into engineering, architecture, fine arts.

Support Found

"Only in the last few years," Meierhenry said, have educators found "physiological and psychological support" for best-suited uses of audio-visuals.

Asked what the future promises, Meierhenry unhesitatingly said, "We're going to keep moving more and more to individual and personal classroom use" of media.

As equipment becomes increasingly miniaturized and portable, that will answer teachers' "great need" to "have things right there when they need it." He predicted that new delivery systems, via cable for example, will expand today's media center to place information instantly in the classroom.

"Massive systems" now built up blandly for equally broad audiences will be "adapted for use of individual youngsters," to suit each's learning ability.

For example Meierhenry said, TV dwells on distant "representations of reality." They're "so slick, so refined, so artificial." He foresees an "unusual attempt" to revive "first-hand experiences," the "primitive kinds of things we once knew and which are necessary for learning . . . not encoded by all this fancy stuff."

3,500 Students

Meierhenry estimates he's taught about 3,500 students in the span of the single course, after getting into audio-visuals by accident in 1946.

He was chosen to direct a research study, "Nebraska Program of Educational Enrichment Through the Use of Motion Pictures," supported by the Carnegie Foundation and others. That prompted him to "study seriously" the potential of audio-visuals.

The study mushroomed into "almost an evangelistic" commitment to expose teachers and administrators to "a whole other side of learning."

Wife Intolerant Since She Quit

DEAR ABBY: When my wife asked me what I wanted for Christmas, I said, "You'd never give it to me, so forget it." She nagged me until I finally told her that I wanted a wife who didn't smoke.

She thought for a minute, then put out her cigarette and asked, "How long do I have to quit for?"

"Forever," I replied. "But if you quit for a year, I'll be satisfied." (She was a three-pack-a-day smoker.)

Well, she hasn't had a cigarette since, and I'm really happy because I know she's better off. But now she's giving everybody who smokes a hard time.

She's put all our ashtrays away, and if we have guests over who start to smoke, she says, "If you MUST smoke, please go outside!"

When we're out and people ask her if she minds if they smoke, she says, "Yes. I'm allergic."

I'm glad she quit smoking, but

HUSBAND

DEAR SUFFERING: Anyone who can quit cold turkey after having been a three-pack-a-day smoker deserves a hand. But she shouldn't give the back of her hand to others who have yet to recognize the hazards of their habit — or are unable (or unwilling) to give it up.

DEAR ABBY: The hostess who was upset by early arrivals is making mountains out of molehills. Some folks are compulsive early arrivers. I know. I'm married to one. If I could sell the time I've spent sitting around in airports because my wife didn't want to "miss the plane," I'd have a fortune.

But the solution to early arrivals for a party is simple: Point them toward the magazine rack or give them today's newspaper. Oh, and assign them the task of greeting other early arrivals. That way you very neatly get the whole problem off your hands.

UNRUFFLED BY EARLY BIRDS

DEAR UN: Thanks for making molehills out of mountains.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think about a person who would accept a lovely, hand-crocheted gift and then enter it in a handicraft show as her own creation? She even removed my "especially handmade" label from it.

HURT AND FURIOUS
DEAR HURT: She can't be playing with a full deck. Let her know that YOU know of her shenanigans.

Up For Sale: White House II

The New York Times
La Porte, Texas — For sale, one White House. Needs work, but no primaries, baby kissing or global burdens required. A real steal at $415,000, with immediate occupancy guaranteed. Why wait until November?

T. Paul Barkley, 76, is selling his "second of a kind" White House, and he doesn't care about the buyer's politics.

"Anyone with the cash will do," he said, watching a frog breaststroke across the outdoor swimming pool. "I had great plans for this place in the 1960s, but I'm not as ambitious now as I was then."

It's not 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. The address is 515 Bayridge Road, and security consists of two rubber snakes bluffing the local pigeons out of relieving themselves on the South Portico furniture.

From $20 Bill
Ross S. Sterling, according to local legend, pulled a $20 bill out of his wallet, showed the backside to his architect, and said, "Oh hell, make it look like this."

That was in the mid-1920s and the result was a 34-room replica of the White House, roughly three-fifths scale. It reportedly cost $1.4 million, but Sterling didn't care about price. He had founded the Humble Oil and Refining Co., sold it for $28 million to Standard Oil of New Jersey (now Exxon), and was preparing for his political future.

Sterling moved in on December 1927, with a housewarming party for 600 friends. With 21,000 square feet of floor space, 15 baths and seven fireplaces, it was the largest home in Texas. Three years later, Sterling was elected governor of Texas.

In those days, the bayside mansions between La Porte and Morgan's Point formed Houston's "gold coast" — a local garden of vanity with all the conspicuous trappings that new oil money could buy. It was Gatsby in cowboy boots, until the Depression. Sterling's fortune then eroded along with his political dreams. After one two-year term as governor, he was rejected by voters and took to raising pigs on his 200 acres across the road from his executive mansion.

His financial resurrection was slow and troubled, so in 1946 he gave his White House to the Houston Optimist Club after the club agreed to pay $225,000 for the 200 acres. The mansion became Boys' Harbor — the residence of up to 70 homeless boys at a time they almost ruined the place.

Barkley bought it in 1961 for a price he won't disclose, and the boys home moved across the road.

Typical Millionaire
Barkley is a typical Texas millionaire. He started out washing dishes, ended up as president of a Houston bank, and made big money in the pipeline equipment business before buying his "Texas White House" as a bayside conversation-piece.

Only nine miles from the Johnson Space Center, the mansion became a party house for the astronauts. Barkley put in a bandstand, pool table, pinball machine, shuffleboard and player piano. He parked his 60-foot yacht at another "cottage" a few miles down the beach, and lived in Houston. But he hosted numerous parties at the mansion, ranging from an opera guild gala for 650 people, fish fries for 250 or so, to intimate games of "chase the ace," a low-risk card game similar to poker.

Plumbing Is Bronze
Meanwhile, Mrs. Bertha Russell was given the task of removing six or seven layers of tasteless paint, exposing the grain of maple and other prized woodwork trim. She has worked off and on for 12 years, and was hard at work in a guest bedroom upstairs.

The mansion has no Oval Office, which may put some buyers off. All the plumbing, however, is bronze. And the chandeliers are brass with gold and silver inlay. Gov. Dolph Briscoe had talked about trying to get the state to buy the place and turn it into a historical site. An offshore drilling company looked at its 522 feet of beachfront and offered $300,000. Another group wanted to erect motel-like appendages on both sides and use the mansion itself as a clubroom. But none of the offers over the past few years have panned out.

So it just sits there, soaking up the Galveston Bay breezes, while real estate men boast that it is the biggest residence on the shore from Miami, Fla., to Brownsville, Texas.

1. Six. Rarely would you have only five spades. You would probably pass with 5-3-3-2 distribution, and probably bid your second suit with 5-4-2-2 or 5-4-3-1 distribution. Your hand may look something like this:
2. Six. The jump to three spades indicates six of them, and you would be unlikely to pass three notrump if you had seven spades. Your hand could be:
3. Five. You can't have only four spades because you would surely have opened the bidding in a minor with what is obviously a three-suited hand. Your most likely distribution is 5-1-4-3, since you passed three notrump and would probably not do so with 6-0-4-3, 5-0-5-3 or 5-0-4-4 distribution. Your hand might be:
4. Five. Your opening bid could have been based on a four-card suit (assuming you play four-card majors). But North's three spade bid, offering delayed support, indicates he has only three of them. It would therefore be wrong to bid four spades at this point with only four trumps. You can't have six spades, since you would have rebid the suit rather than bid two notrump. A typical hand would be:
5. Three. North has only four spades, judging from his two notrump bid. If you had four also, you would indicate this by bidding three (or possibly four) spades instead of three clubs. You probably have this type of hand:

'The Robber Bridegroom'

Bit Of Everything, All Fun

By BILL WALLIS

The City Center Acting Company's fine, spirited production of Alfred Uhry and Robert Waldman's "The Robber Bridegroom" opened at Kimball Recital Hall Thursday night and will be repeated Friday and Monday nights.

"The Robber Bridegroom" is a barrel of laughs, a sack of sassy songs and noisy barriard of characters. The story is a little bit of Cinderella, a little Grand Ole Opry, a little Robin Hood — but all fun, and done with undeniable vigor and style.

The acting is excellent, the music beautifully stitched into the plot and the drama open, vibrant and tastefully melodramatic. In addition, the entire production is choreographed with verve by Donald Saddler with steps straight from the hill country (even though the action occurs in Mississippi). All these aspects are thoroughly integrated, to the delight of the theatre goer.

The story is from a Eudora Welty tale spun out on the stage in a smooth tapestry of movement and song. The Mississippi marauder (Jamie Lockhart) is played by Kevin Kline. He is a born thief who enjoys his trade whether it involves stealing the gold and land of a rich farmer (Clement Musgrove played by a palpable David Schramm) or the heart of his daughter Rosamund delightfully portrayed by Patti LaPone. Kline and LaPone were superb in every respect of their portrayals.

Their acting, movement, and musical abilities made their performances the highlights of the evening. And this is only right. They are after all, the lovers and when you're "deep in the woods" with "nuthin' up" it doesn't matter if you're "some poor tied-up darlin'" or if you've got "riches" (to use a few song titles from the show), love is where it's at.

The forces of true love are opposed by the treacherous and lusty stepmother of Rosamund, aptly named Salome, portrayed to absolute witchy perfection by Mary Lou Rosato. In an act of absolute justice the playwright has a grainy angel in disguise named Little Harp (played by James Harper) toss Salome into the ravine before she has a chance to behead anyone (She does wield an axe at one point). All winds up happily in New Orleans with a legalized villain, an illegitimate set of twins, and the entire city stomping in the streets.

The ensemble is simply superb, and a constant delight to watch and to listen to. The action never stops and laughter flows freely throughout the production. The settings by Doug Schmidt, costumes by Jeanne Burton, and lighting by David Segal are excellent and beautifully functional. Much of the integration of elements has resulted by improvisatory theatre technique in rehearsal. The use of props, set pieces, and costumes in the creation of dramatic illusion was in itself entertaining — but never detracting.

This show is not only tongue-in-cheek, but chaw-in-the-jaw as well. It should probably be rated PG for a joyful bit of nudity. But anyone who delights in a good belly laugh, and the fun of a hoedown or a good mellerdrama will never forgive themselves if they miss this production.

If the City Center's production of William Congreve's "The Way of the World," set for 2 p.m. Saturday, is as articulate and generally excellent as this fine country musical, admirers of the Restoration style are in for a treat.

Health Council OKs Body Scanner Plans

Taking no one by surprise, the Southeast Nebraska Health Planning Council (SeNHPC) board of directors Thursday night gave its stamp of approval to the idea of having whole-body CAT scanners in two Lincoln hospitals.

Board members voted unanimously to endorse scanner acquisition proposals submitted by Lincoln General and Bryan Memorial hospitals to the State Health Department's Division of Hospitals and Medical Facilities.

The Lincoln General proposal, which was submitted by Radiology Associates PC, would involve the expenditure of $610,000 for acquisition of the scanner and remodeling Bryan's proposed expenditure is $600,000.

Prior to the vote John Wise, chairman of a task force which studied the proposals, told board members the task force found the applications viable in terms of need, manpower and financial feasibility.

In other action, the board voted to approve an expansion project proposal submitted by the Lakeview Rest Home in Firth.

The project would involve the addition of 20 beds to the current 41-bed facility, and has an estimated cost of $180,000.

Officials Admit Error On Desegregation Plan

Omaha (AP) — Representatives of the U.S. Department of Justice Thursday told Omaha Board of Education attorneys the Justice Department had erred in telling a federal court judge that the Omaha Public Schools had agreed to a change in its proposed desegregation plan.

The school district is under orders of the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals to fully integrate Omaha next September. The Justice Department had advised U.S. District Court Judge Albert Schatz that because the schools agreed to involve third grade students in the plan in the same way second grade students would be reassigned, the department would not demand the reassignment of first grade students.

Earlier school officials said there had not been a change in the proposed plan by mutual agreement.

Under the school district plan submitted Dec. 31 to Judge Schatz, grade level centers for second grade students in clustered schools would be established. An alternate plan proposed by the Justice Department would also use third grade centers.

School officials said not agreed upon changes had been reached with the Justice Department and said neither they or the district's attorneys had the authority to change the plan without the consent of the school board.

School officials said the alleged agreement was included in a revision of the Justice Department's plan requested by Judge Schatz.

'The Robber Bridegroom' Bit Of Everything, All Fun

By BILL WALLIS
The City Center Acting Company's fine, spirited production of Alfred Uhry and Robert Waldman's "The Robber Bridegroom" opened at Kimball Recital Hall Thursday night and will be repeated Friday and Monday nights.

"The Robber Bridegroom" is a barrel of laughs, a sack of sassy songs, and a noisy barnyard of characters. The story is a little bit of Cinderella, a little Grand Ole Opry, a little Robin Hood — but all fun, and done with undeniable vigor and style.

The acting is excellent, the music beautifully stitched into the plot and the drama open, vibrant and tastefully melodramatic. In addition, the entire production is choreographed with verve by Donald Saddler, with steps straight from the hill country (even though the action occurs in Mississippi). All these aspects are thoroughly integrated, to the delight of the theatre goer.

The story is from a Eudora Welty tale, spun out on the stage in a smooth tapestry of movement and song. The Mississippi marauder (Jamie Lockhart) is played by Kevin Kline. He is a born thief, who enjoys his trade, whether it involves stealing the gold and land of a rich farmer (Clemment Musgrove, played by a palpable David Schramm), or the heart of his daughter Rosamund, delightfully portrayed by Patti LuPone. Kline and LuPone were superb in every respect of their portrayals.

Their acting, movement, and musical abilities made their performances the highlights of the evening. And this is only right. They are, after all, the lovers, and when you're "deep in the woods" with "nuthin up" it doesn't matter if you're "some poor tied-up darlin'" or if you've got "riches" (to use a few song titles from the show), love is where it's at.

The forces of true love are opposed by the treacherous and lusty stepmother of Rosamund, aptly named Salome, portrayed to absolute witchy perfection by Mary Lou Rosato. In an act of absolute justice the playwright has a grainy angel in disguise named Little Harp (played by James Harper) toss Salome into the ravine before she has a chance to behead anyone. (She does wield an axe at one point.) All winds up happily in New Orleans with a legalized villain, an illegitimate set of twins, and the entire city stomping in the streets.

The ensemble is simply superb, and a constant delight to watch and to listen to. The action never stops and laughter flows freely throughout the production. The settings by Doug Schmidt, costumes by Jeanne Button, and lighting by David Segal are excellent and beautifully functional. Much of the integration of elements has resulted by improvisatory theatre technique in rehearsal. The use of props, set pieces, and costumes in the creation of dramatic illusion was in itself entertaining — but never detracting.

This show is not only tongue-in-cheek, but chaw-in-the-jaw as well. It should probably be rated PG for a joyful bit of nudity. But anyone who delights in a good belly laugh, and the fun of a hoedown or a good mellerdrama will never forgive themselves if they miss this production.

If the City Center's production of William Congreve's "The Way of the World," set for 2 p.m. Saturday, is as articulate and generally excellent as this fine country musical, admirers of the Restoration style are in for a treat.

Health Council OKs Body Scanner Plans

Taking no one by surprise, the Southeast Nebraska Health Planning Council (SeNHPC) board of directors Thursday night gave its stamp of approval to the idea of having whole-body CAT scanners in two Lincoln hospitals.

Board members voted unanimously to endorse scanner acquisition proposals submitted by Lincoln General and Bryan Memorial hospitals to the State Health Department's Division of Hospitals and Medical Facilities.

The Lincoln General proposal, which was submitted by Radiology Associates PC, would involve the expenditure of $510,000 for acquisition of the scanner and remodeling. Bryan's proposed expenditure is $600,000.

Prior to the vote, John Wise, chairman of a task force which studied the proposals, told board members the task force found the applications viable in terms of need, manpower and financial feasibility.

In other action, the board voted to approve an expansion project proposal submitted by the Lakeview Rest Home in Firth.

The project would involve the addition of 20 beds to the current 41-bed facility, and has an estimated cost of $180,000.

Officials Admit Error On Desegregation Plan

Omaha (AP) — Representatives of the U.S. Department of Justice Thursday told Omaha Board of Education attorneys the Justice Department had erred in telling a federal court judge that the Omaha Public Schools had agreed to a change in its proposed desegregation plan.

The school district is under orders of the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals to fully integrate Omaha next September. The Justice Department had advised U.S. District Court Judge Albert Schatz that because the schools agreed to involve third grade students in the plan in the same way second grade students would be reassigned, the department would not demand the reassignment of first grade students.

Earlier, school officials said there had not been a change in the proposed plan by mutual agreement.

Under the school district plan submitted Dec. 31 to Judge Schatz, grade level centers for second grade students in clustered schools would be established. An alternate plan proposed by the Justice Department would also use third grade centers.

School officials said not agreed upon changes had been reached with the Justice Department and said neither they or the district's attorneys had the authority to change the plan without the consent of the school board.

School officials said the alleged agreement was included in a revision of the Justice Department's plan requested by Judge Schatz.

Ford Recalls Bus Chassis

Detroit (AP) — Some 11,600 Ford Motor Co. bus chassis and trucks are being recalled to correct a possible defect in the front suspension system, the automaker said Thursday.

Ford said rivets on hanger brackets for front springs may have had undersized heads, and heavy use could cause the brackets to crack, possibly causing eventual loss of steering with continued use.

Ford said the vehicles involved were 1974 and 1975 B-series bus chassis and 1975 F-Series trucks with wheel bases of 260.5 inches. Ford does not manufacture whole buses, but sells the frames and drive train to other firms, which mount bodies on the Ford-produced chassis.

Dyas Suggests 5 Debates With Opponent Zorinsky

Democratic senatorial candidate Hess Dyas Thursday suggested a series of five debates throughout the state with his opponent, Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky.

Dyas said he has had difficulty clearly interpreting Zorinsky's earlier response to his debate proposal.

Perhaps, he said, a specific proposal "would help to clarify the debate issue."

Dyas proposed that debates be scheduled for five Saturdays, beginning April 3, in South Sioux City, Lincoln, Kearney, Scottsbluff and Omaha.

Topics, he said, could include agriculture, health care and the problems of the aged, economic issues, the size of government and large corporations and urban problems.

Earlier, Zorinsky had responded to Dyas with what appeared to be a decision not to schedule debates.

"I am sorry to learn of the difficulty you are having with your campaign and I sympathize with your problem," Zorinsky wrote in a letter addressed to "Candidate Dyas."

San Francisco — Up in the morning's chill air and popped in a couple of vitamins "Vitamins are of little value except to raise the spirits of the taker," says the American Medical Association's magazine of health (The one you look at upside down while you wait for the nurse to put her head out the door "Doctor will see you now")

For a long time I dropped the name of a tranquilizer (which shall now be nameless) in my daily writing. Not for it. Not against it. Just dropped it in as a way of life.

The tranquilizer attorney wrote me a stern letter after each mention. "Our client company feels that your writing may give the product a generic meaning. . . ." Meaning the pill gets so well known people don't even capitalize it any more.

They walk into the drug store and say "Give me some Bim-bos." The druggist gives them a jar of Sambos. So similar nobody cares.

I never answered the lawyer. Those are empty threats. (You really do the lawyer a favor: He sends a copy to his client president. Shows he's on the job. A tiger guarding the door.)

So what happened? Science discovered that this calmer-downer was so much wind in the willows. You might as well have been taking gundrops.

It got a good deal of press: "The American Medical Association said yesterday after thorough research etc."

What else happened? People went right on taking the tranquilizer. Sales went up. I quit mentioning it. And the lawyer probably lost his job. He couldn't produce an opponent.

Smith Boosts Missouri Win

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Rickey Green's two free throws with two seconds remaining capped an 80-76 victory for ninth-ranked Michigan over No. 8 Notre Dame Thursday night after Missouri defeated Texas Tech 86-75 behind Willie Smith's 30 points in the NCAA Midwest Regional basketball semifinals.

Michigan and Missouri, ranked 11th, will meet at 12:15 p.m. EST Saturday to decide the regional championship and the team that will advance to the NCAA final four in Philadelphia next week.

Notre Dame, trailing 78-76, blew a chance to tie the score in the closing moments when Duke Williams fumbled the ball out of bounds under the Irish basket.

Michigan then had no trouble breaking the Notre Dame press and Green was fouled by substitute guard Jeff Carpenter as he drove toward the hoop.

Green, Michigan's leading scorer with 20 points, sank the two foul shots to seal the Wolverines' 23rd victory against six losses.

Burly Adrian Dantley muscled in 31 points to top all scorers, but Michigan shut off the Notre Dame All-America with only one basket in the final eight minutes.

By virtually neutralizing Notre Dame's big gun in the closing minutes, Michigan was able to go ahead to stay at 71-70 on a turnaround jumper by freshman Phil Hubbard with 3:44 to play.

All of the Michigan starters finished in double figures. John Robinson, who converted a steal into a crucial three-point play with 1:07 remaining, finished with 15 points, Steve Grote had 14, Wayman Britt 12 and Hubbard 11.

Notre Dame got 15 points from Williams and 10 from Bill Paterno, while Dave Patton grabbed 13 rebounds for the Irish to lead both teams in that department.

Nebraska Stumbles In Meet

Amarillo, Tex. — Hot shooting by Belmont College propelled the Nashville school past the University of Nebraska here Thursday, 77-52, in the opening round of the National Women's Invitational Tournament.

In the opening game of the tournament, the University of Nevada-Las Vegas downed Indiana State, 87-75 to advance to the quarterfinals.

Belmont College jumped to a quick 8-0 lead and increased the margin to 42-20 at the half.

The combination of Sandra Smallwood and Leslie Campbell, shooting outside and inside, respectively, poured in 43 of Belmont's points. Smallwood hit nine of 14 fielders and a perfect nine of nine from the free throw line.

Belmont College shot 57 per cent from the field, compared to Nebraska's 34 per cent.

Darcy Williamson took NU scoring honors with 12, followed by Kathy Hawkins and Sherry Brink with 11 apiece and Brenda Lightbody, who came off the bench in the second half, with 10.

Nebraska, now 21-9, will play the loser of the UCLA v. West Texas State game in a consolation game Friday at 3 p.m.

Smallwood took game scoring honors with 27 points. Campbell contributed 16, while Jan MacRae contributed 10.

Snyder Downs NU Intramurals

Snyder Fiberglass, the city recreation league champion, outlasted the University of Nebraska intramural champion, "1641", 50-49 in a playoff game Thursday night at the NU Women's PE Building.

Tom Novak led the Snyder scoring, with 18 points, followed by John Strain with 10.

Stu Nelson took game scoring honors with 21 points for "1641". Steve Lefler added 14 for the university team.

In the first game, Smith, a 6-2 whirlwind dervish, killed Tech's last hopes when he scored back-to-back baskets on a rebound shot and a corner jumper after the Raiders had fought to within 77-70 with 4:00 to play.

Sparked by substitute guards Mike Edwards and Geoff Huston, the Texans refused to fold after their ace, 6-9 Rick Bullock, fouled out with 8:46 remaining. Bullock scored a team-high 23 points before departing.

Smith hit an 18-foot jump shot with 7:16 left in the first half to put Missouri ahead for good at 26-25.

The Tigers went 35-30 at the half and stretched their margin to 59-42 before Tech rallied to trim that margin to 77-70.

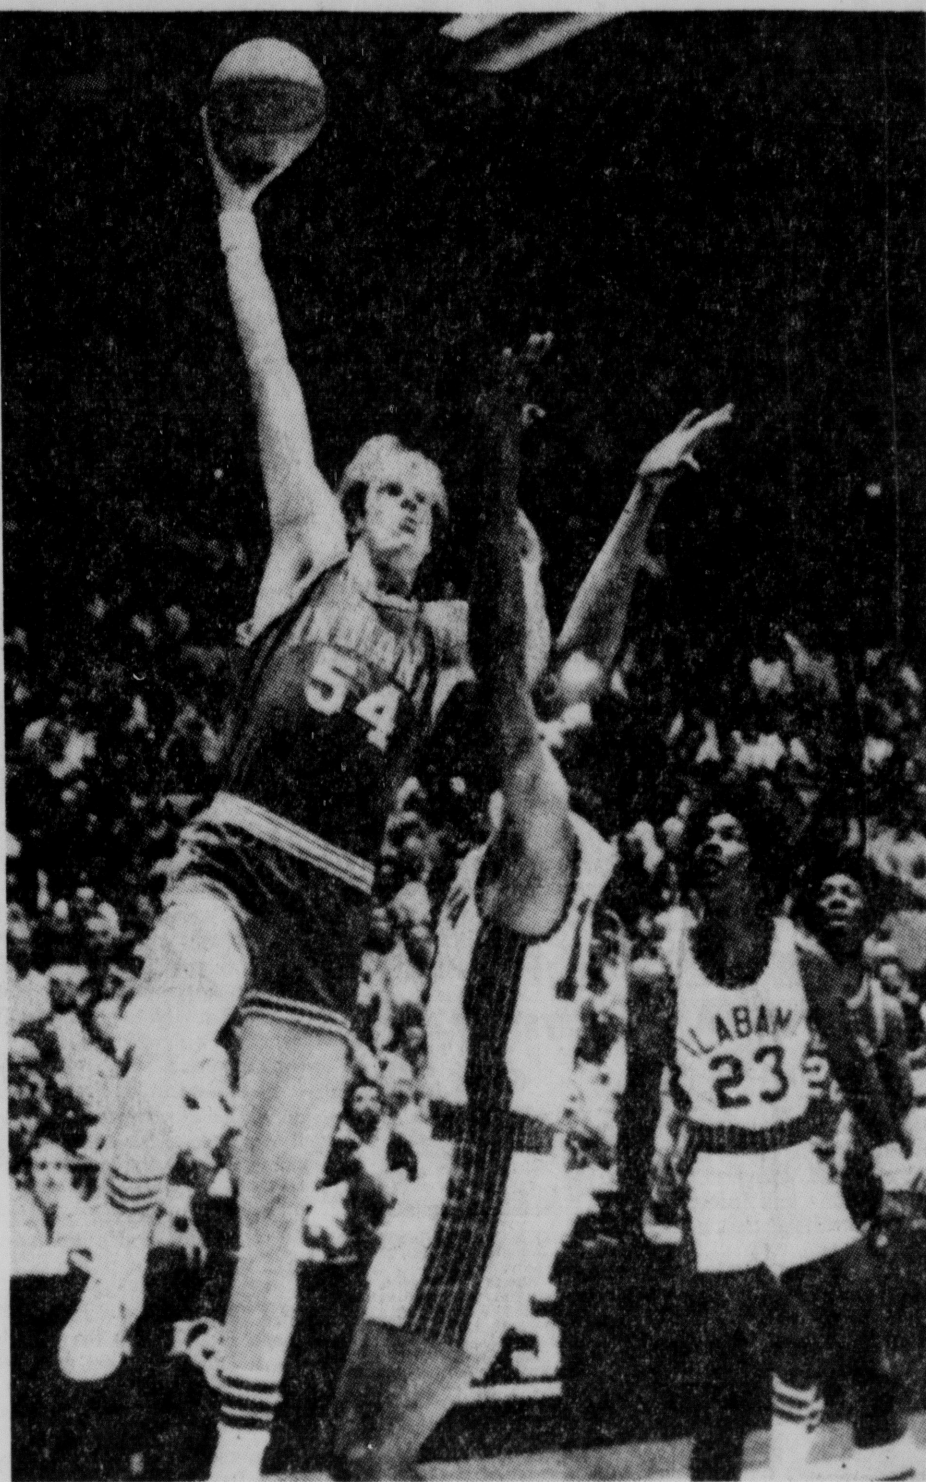

In a virtuoso performance, Smith also accounted for seven assists and 10 rebounds from his guard position. He was backed in the Missouri scoring column by Jim Kennedy and Kim Anderson with 15 points each. Anderson also contributed 11 rebounds. With 14 points, Mike Russell was second high for Tech, which bows out with a 25-6 record.

Marquette, Indiana Move To Showdown

From News Wires

Indiana and Rutgers remained unbeaten, Marquette won as expected and Missouri, Michigan and VMI also advanced Thursday night as the field for the NCAA Basketball Tournament was reduced to eight.

In the Midwest regional at Baton Rouge, La., Indiana held off Alabama 74-69 and Marquette beat Western Michigan 62-57. In the East at Greensboro, N.C., Rutgers ran past Connecticut 93-79 and VMI outlasted DePaul 71-66 in overtime. In the Midwest at Louisville Michigan got by Notre Dame 80-76 and Missouri topped Texas Tech 86-75.

The final two spots were to be determined in late games matching Nevada-Las Vegas against Arizona and UCLA against Pepperdine in the West regional at Los Angeles.

Thursday night's winners will compete in Saturday's regional finals with the winners advancing to the final round of four in Philadelphia. The semifinals will be played a week from Saturday and the finals Monday night, March 29.

Indiana, 29-0 and rated No. 1 throughout the season, held off a strong Alabama team behind All-American Scott May's 25 points. May put the Hoosiers ahead for good with a jump shot with 2:01 remaining, and Tom Abernethy and Bob Wilkerson added free throws to ice Indiana's triumph.

Alabama, whose towering center Leon Douglas managed just 12 points, was held scoreless for the final 3:57 of the game.

Burly center Kent Benson, who spent much of the second half on the bench after picking up his fourth foul, added 15 points for Coach Bobby Knight's Hoosiers who have lost just one of their last 64 contests. T.R. Dunn netted 16 points for the sixth-ranked Crimson Tide, 22-5.

Marquette, 27-1 and ranked No. 2, had its hands full before subduing 10th-ranked Western Michigan. The scrappy Broncos led 51-50 with 7:15 remaining, but the Warriors went ahead for good on baskets by Butch Lee, Jerome Whitehead and Bo Ellis, then froze the ball over the final two minutes to clinch their 23rd consecutive victory.

Lee led the balanced Marquette attack with 16 points and Tom Cutler had 21 for 10th ranked Western Michigan, 25-3. Saturday's Indiana-Marquette clash shapes up as the best of the regional finals and, perhaps, the best game of the entire tournament.

Rutgers, 30-0 and ranked No. 4, ran past Connecticut behind freshman reserve Abdel Anderson who scored 19 points and pulled down 11 rebounds. The Scarlet Knights ran off nine straight points early in the second half and coasted home.

All-American Phil Sellers was held to just eight points, but Anderson and regulars Ed Jordan and Mike Dabney, who scored 18 points each, picked up the slack. Al Weston had 24 points and Tony Hanson 23 for Connecticut, 18-10.

Rutgers will face unheralded VMI, 22-9, in the East finals. The Keydets blew an 11-point lead in regulation, then rallied in the overtime for the victory against DePaul. Will Bynum netted 22 points for VMI and Curt Repart contributed four key points in the extra period.

Ron Norwood had 23 points to lead the 17th-ranked Blue Demons, 20-9. There were 57 personal fouls called in the contest, 35 against DePaul which had five players foul out.

DePaul led through most of the first half with Dave Corzine, a 6-11 center, dominating the action under the boards and scoring 12 points. But Corzine could score only one field goal in the second half and fouled out with 5:55 remaining.

Late in the second half VMI outscored DePaul 11-1 to take an 11 point lead with three and a half minutes to play.

Arizona Stuns Nevada-LV

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Arizona's unranked Wildcats, scoring all 11 of their overtime points from the free throw line, recorded the biggest upset of the NCAA playoffs Thursday night when they knocked out fourth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas 114-109 in a semifinal game of the West Regional.

The surprising Western Athletic Conference champions earned the right to face the winner of Thursday night's other semifinal game, pitting defending national champion UCLA against little Pepperdine.

Herm Harris, a 6-foot-5 junior guard, connected on a free throw with 14 seconds left in regulation to play to send the game into overtime at 103-103. In the five-minute overtime session, Harris made four more free throws and was the game's top scorer with 31 points.

Bob Elliott, Arizona's 6-10 center who scored only two points and picked up three fouls in the first half, finished with 20 points, including four free throws in overtime while Jim Rappis, playing despite a painful foot injury suffered in the first half, added 24 for the Wildcats.

Arizona took the lead to stay with just 12 seconds gone in overtime when Elliott converted a pair of free throws to make the score 105-103. Harris then made two more free throws 36 seconds later and the Wildcats were on top 107-103.

For Nevada, which had lost just once in 30 starts going into Thursday night's game, it was a devastating defeat. The Rebels fell 11 points behind in the first half but came back to get within four at halftime 51-47.

Las Vegas suffered a severe blow when 6-6 junior Eddie Owens, its No. 1 scorer with a 23.5-point average, fouled out with 11:16 left in regulation.

Bill Taylor added 18 for the Wildcats, 16 in the opening half, but Al Fleming, Arizona's all-time career scorer, was held to just six points.

Camps Open But Talks Slow

By HAL BOCK AP Sports Writer

Baseball's spring training camps began opening Thursday in the wake of Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's order that ended the 17-day shutdown, but there was no progress towards a settlement of the labor crisis.

Both sides have reassembled in New York following week-long negotiations in Florida that failed to produce a final solution to the problem. However, there were no talks Thursday and there probably won't be any before Sunday.

That's because the owners' Player Relations Committee has scheduled a Friday meeting, then the 24 major league clubs will huddle in a joint meeting Saturday. Those two sessions won't leave management people very much time for Marvin Miller, executive director of the players association.

"They probably wouldn't want to talk again until after those meetings anyway," said Miller.

The conversation within those meetings could be more meaningful than anything the owners might have to say to Miller at the moment.

Several of the club owners reportedly opposed the "best and final" offer of their negotiating committee, which produced at least a partial surrender on the reserve-clause issue and offered all players free-agent status in either 1976 or 1977.

And some were not thrilled with the commissioner's order opening the camps—although there were also reports that some other owners had pressured Kuhn to do so.

It is entirely likely that those sentiments, opposing the actions that have been taken, will be aired thoroughly during the Friday and Saturday meetings.

Miller welcomed the commissioner's action. "It was a constructive act which the players have called for some time," he said.

"There is no question that the lockout had a deteriorating effect on negotiations," Miller continued. "They thought they'd have the players trembling. But all they accomplished was getting the players madder and madder. They must understand they are dealing with very competent people and beating them over the head won't accomplish their goals."

Asked if the opening of camps might soften the players' resolve on the issues, Miller said, "I don't think so. It will just prevent relations from deteriorating any further."

Miller called John Gaherin, the owners' chief negotiator, Thursday to read him the resolution adopted by the players at their executive board meeting in Tampa.

That meeting, called to consider the owners' offer, had been expected to reject the proposal. Instead, the 24 player representatives took a softer stance, recommending reopening of negotiations and acceptance of a standing offer by the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, which had notified both sides that it stood ready to enter the dispute.

The players also indicated they would be willing to accept a modified free-agent rule—something less than the complete freedom permitted by the decision of an arbitrator and upheld by two federal courts, but something more than the eight-team draft pool for free agents offered in the owners' last proposal.

Meanwhile, most teams held their first organized workouts of the spring.

In Fort Lauderdale, Fla. 14 New York Yankees were on hand, including rookie pitcher Scott McGregor, who flew all night from California and went straight to the workout after his plane landed at 7 a.m. Missing from the Yankees' workout, however, was outfielder Mickey Rivers, who lives in nearby Miami.

The Kansas City Royals had 20 players on hand and they ran through a three-hour drill at Fort Myers, Fla. The St. Louis Cardinals had 16 players in camp with 16 more expected at St. Petersburg, Fla., Friday, and the squad expected to be 90 per cent complete by Sunday.

Eleven Los Angeles Dodgers flew on the team's plane from California to the club's Vero Beach, Fla., base. The Detroit Tigers had 33 of their 40 roster players on hand at Lakeland, Fla. In Tucson, Ariz., the Cleveland Indians opened camp with 26 players on hand for the first drills.

There were 30 rostered players on hand at the Atlanta Braves' camp in West Palm Beach, Fla., but the Braves won't begin formal work until Friday.

Other teams that got started were the world champion Cincinnati Reds, the Philadelphia Phillies, California Angels, Baltimore Orioles, Chicago Cubs and American League champion Boston Red Sox.

NC-Charlotte, Kentucky Gain NIT Finals Berths

NEW YORK (UPI) — Melvin Watkins sank an eight-foot turnaround jumper with 30 seconds left Thursday night to give UNC-Charlotte a 80-79 semifinal victory over North Carolina State in the National Invitation Tournament.

In the opening game of the doubleheader, Kentucky guard Larry Johnson drove almost the full length of the court in the final seven seconds and scored on a lefthanded layup as time expired to give the Wildcats a 79-78 victory over Providence.

N.C. State still had several chances to beat the surprising 49ers, but Phil Spence and Glenn Sudhop each missed clear taps in the final seconds.

Charlotte's Cedric "Cornbread" Maxwell, who set an NIT record for free throws, finished with a game high 27 points. Maxwell, who converted 13 of 14 free throw attempts, raised his NIT total to 39 of 43 in three games, breaking Alan Seiden's record of 38 successful foul shots set in four games for St. John's in 1959.

Watkins finished with 18 points, while forward Lew Massey had 22.

The 49ers, who sank 28 of 34 free throw attempts, led almost the entire game and received a big boost when the Wolfpack's Kenny Carr fouled out with 10:54 to play.

Carr finished with 20 points and Spence took up the scoring responsibility in Carr's absence to finish with 22.

UNC-Charlotte, who had lost a regular season decision to North Carolina State, will meet Kentucky in the final Sunday afternoon.

Johnson's last second basket in the opening game spoiled two spectacular comebacks by the Friars.

Billy Eason, who finished with 25 points, scored on a layup with eight seconds left to give Providence the lead for the first time since the Friars lead 2-1.

Eason's basket capped a Providence rally that had wiped out an 11-point second half deficit after the Friars earlier had come back from 18 points down in the first half to tie the Wildcats.

Great Plains Meet Provides Variety

By VIRGIL PARKER

The seventh-annual Great Plains Indoor Swimming Championships opens a three-day stand in the East High pool Friday night.

Meet director Larry Hickok reports "over 400 individual contestants from 10 different states will be on hand."

The individuals represent 42 different teams. One swimmer has entered from Mississippi, while the others are from the Midwest states of Nebraska, Colorado, South Dakota, Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota, Oklahoma, Kansas and Wisconsin.

"Omaha Westside Swim Club will be heavily represented," Hickok says. "They have a number of boys from the Westside High state championship team, who are now eligible to compete with the prep season completed."

Hickok reminds that the Great Plains is "strictly an 'A' meet, and as a result the cutoff qualifying times are really tough. We expect an outstanding meet and some excellent competition."

Five separate sessions are on the schedule. The meet opens Friday night with the longer, time-consuming distance events.

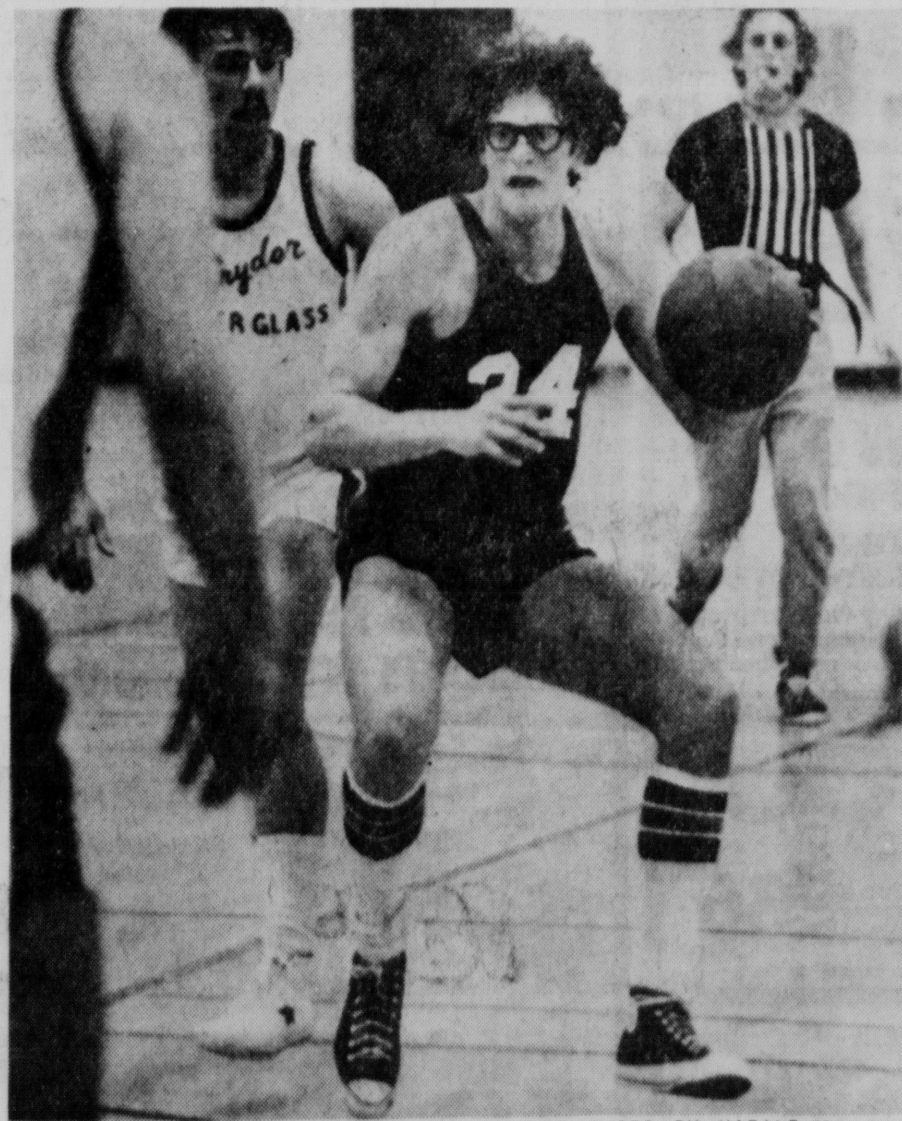

The senior 800-yard freestyle relay starts the competition at 6 p.m. The 200-yard freestyle for 10 and under and the 11-12 age groups will be followed by the 500-yard free for 12-14 and the senior groups.

Each event is duplicated for both boys and girls.

Saturday and Sunday will be filled with nearly continuous action. The morning session begins each day at 8:30 a.m. The afternoon sessions will not start before 1 p.m., but could be delayed beyond that time. There will be at least a 30-minute warmup session between the finish of the morning session and the beginning of the afternoon program each day.

The East High pool has seating for 1,200 spectators, and the meet is open free to the general public.

NFL May Resume Talks On Collective Bargaining

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Spokesmen for the National Football League and the players association said Thursday they felt negotiations for a collective bargaining contract, absent the past two years, can be renewed next week.

Dick Anderson, defensive back for the Miami Dolphins and the new president of the players group, flew from Miami to address the owners for 20 minutes at their annual meeting.

"We expressed interest in negotiating and they did too," Anderson said after what he described as a good-faith session with the owners.

Wellington Mara, owner of the New York Giants and chairman of the NFL Management Council which handles its negotiations, said: "I think this is a very good start. You have to give points to anyone who flies out here from Miami to meet with the owners for 20 minutes."

"We just want to play football without a hostile attitude," Anderson said.

He added that he, Fred Willis of the Houston Oilers and Jack Youngblood of the Los Angeles Rams came to the meeting not to negotiate at this session, but to show they were ready, willing and able to reopen the negotiations.

Willis added, "We're trying to take the first step toward settlement. I don't think the public needs or wants strikes or lawsuits. I think we should get the game on."

Anderson pointed out that the players' association has changed its leadership and it was suggested that perhaps the Management Council might follow a similar path.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the players group, was in San Francisco for the Kapp litigation.

gation and did not accompany the three members of the players association executive board. Willis commented, "I wish the media would deal more with the issues we're trying to negotiate than with Ed Garvey as an issue."

Several owners have been sharply critical of Garvey and his direction of the players association.

"Our meeting here was just a good faith gesture on our part to show we want to sit down with owners, have better communications and work out an agreement beneficial to both sides so we can play football."

"But Garvey is not the reason we don't have an agreement; the system is the reason we don't have an agreement. It should be worked out and changed."

A major stumbling block has been the so-called Rozelle Rule that compensates a team which loses a player who plays out his option and signs with another club.

An NFL team holds the option for one year after a player has completed his contract. But when he fulfills that option and signs with another club, the latter must compensate the former with players or draft rights.

Courts in the Mackey case in Minneapolis and the Kapp case in San Francisco have ruled this illegal.

The players have also filed a class action damage suit against the owners on the illegality of the Rozelle Rule. Anderson said he was involved in the suit along with 78 others but said there were no money figures involved

Tehrani Quits At Valentine

Valentine (AP) — One of the state's most successful wrestling coaches, Mo Tehrani of Valentine High School, announced Thursday that he is resigning.

Tehrani said he will devote full time to his recently-purchased auto dealership here.

Tehrani was Valentine's first and only wrestling coach, and it was the only head coaching job the Chadron State graduate ever had. He took the job in 1964, and in the past 12 years he has led the Badgers to three state Class B team championships.

Valentine went undefeated in dual competition in seven different years, and Tehrani's teams had never lost two duals in a row until this season, when the Badgers dropped their first three, then went undefeated in dual meets the rest of the way.

Overall, Tehrani's teams have compiled a 110-14 record in dual competition. At one point, Valentine won 53 consecutive dual matches, a state record. Overall, the Badgers won 53 tournaments under Tehrani, and ran off a string of 16 straight tourney victories.

NFL May Resume Talks On Collective Bargaining

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Spokenmen for the National Football League and the players association said Thursday they felt negotiations for a collective bargaining contract, absent the past two years, can be renewed next week.

Dick Anderson, defensive back for the Miami Dolphins and the new president of the players group, flew from Miami to address the owners for 20 minutes at their annual meeting.

"We expressed interest in negotiating and they did too," Anderson said after what he described as a good-faith session with the owners.

Wellington Mara, owner of the New York Giants and chairman of the NFL Management Council which handles its negotiations, said: "I think this is a very good start. You have to give points to anyone who flies out here from Miami to meet with the owners for 20 minutes."

Both Anderson and Mara agreed the negotiations must cover all points of a collective bargaining agreement.

"We just want to play football without a hostile attitude," Anderson said.

He added that he, Fred Willis of the Houston Oilers and Jack Youngblood of the Los Angeles Rams came to the meeting not to negotiate at this session, but to show they were ready, willing and able to reopen the negotiations.

Willis added, "We're trying to take the first step toward settlement. I don't think the public needs or wants strikes or lawsuits. I think we should get the game on."

Anderson pointed out that the players association has changed its leadership and it was suggested that perhaps the Management Council might follow a similar path.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the players group, was in San Francisco for the Kapp ligation and did not accompany the three members of the players association executive board. Willis commented, "I wish the media would deal more with the issues we're trying to negotiate than with Ed Garvey as an issue."

Trout Fishing May Decline

By The Associated Press
Trout fishing in Lake McConaughy may be on the decline as the result of a large fish kill.

The trout populations in about one mile of two major Panhandle spawning streams have been wiped out by poachers using toxic chemicals to stun or kill the fish, according to the Game and Parks Commission.

The incidents took place on Red Willow and Nine Mile creeks, which are located only a few miles from each other between Scottsbluff and Bridgeport. The two creeks and a handful North Platte River feeder streams are the only spawning grounds for the rainbow trout which live in Lake McConaughy, and migrate up the river each spring and fall to deposit their eggs.

In addition to killing a large number of spawning trout, officials said the poachers also destroyed all eggs in portions of the two streams, wiped out the young trout which hatched last fall, and killed most of the eight to 10-inch yearling trout which were preparing to make their way downstream to Lake McConaughy.

With only 30 miles of stream supporting natural rainbow trout production in the North Platte valley the two fish kills will seriously affect fishing in both the streams and at Lake McConaughy, officials said.

An investigation is under way but no suspects have been taken into custody.

Trout Fishing May Decline

By The Associated Press
Trout fishing in Lake McConaughy may be on the decline as the result of a large fish kill.

The trout populations in about one mile of two major Panhandle spawning streams have been wiped out by poachers using toxic chemicals to stun or kill the fish, according to the Game and Parks Commission.

The incidents took place on Red Willow and Nine Mile creeks, which are located only a few miles from each other between Scottsbluff and Bridgeport. The two creeks and a handful North Platte River feeder streams are the only spawning grounds for the rainbow trout which live in Lake McConaughy, and migrate up the river each spring and fall to deposit their eggs.

In addition to killing a large number of spawning trout, officials said the poachers also destroyed all eggs in portions of the two streams, wiped out the young trout which hatched last fall, and killed most of the eight to 10-inch yearling trout which were preparing to make their way downstream to Lake McConaughy.

With only 30 miles of stream supporting natural rainbow trout production in the North Platte valley, the two fish kills will seriously affect fishing in both the streams and at Lake McConaughy, officials said.

An investigation is under way, but no suspects have been taken into custody.

National Park rangers said the car was found in an unpaved parking lot near Elkmont Mountain Campground. The lot, which can accommodate about a dozen cars, normally is used by hikers heading off for trails through the dense woods.
Dick Moeller, chief ranger at the Great Smoky Mountain National Park, said the empty rust-colored station wagon had been in the lot "between a week and 10 days." It was traced through the National Criminal Information Center to Bishop.

Bishop, 39, is sought for the bludgeoning death of his wife, Annette, in their Bethesda, Md., home March 1. Her body and those of their three sons and Bishop's mother were recovered from a shallow grave in Tyreel County, N.C., March 2, but were not identified for several days.

Staying Ahead

Metrics Hard For Adults,
Very Easy For Children

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

New York — Although we're headed pell-mell for the metric system, the government isn't spending much money to show us how to use it. The Metric Education Program, run by the U.S. Office of Education, has only $2 million this year to teach us all what a dekagram is, and more than 575 groups have applied for grants.

Instead, the job of public education has fallen mainly to business. But who is to teach business? Evan Johnston, head of the Northeast Metric Resource center at the University of Massachusetts (Amherst, Mass. 01002), says that many metric promotions make embarrassing mistakes.

One company brought out a "metric" ruler divided into traditional fractional parts. A Boston restaurant had a "metric" placemat that contained 18 errors. A paper cup manufacturer made a metric cup, then labeled it "five fluid ounces."

Fortunately, such slips don't do much damage because only the metric purists pay any attention. When the rest of us get a metric lesson on our placemats, we hastily cover it with a plate of chopped sirloin and catsup. Johnson agrees that the adults in this country are not looking forward to giving up pounds, feet, inches and quarts. He recently gave a metric lecture to a kindergarten, and found the children enthusiastic, and the teachers miserable.

Easy For Children

The children now being born will probably never even learn how much is there in a pound (is it 16 or is that in a meter, the basic unit of length, is a little longer than a yard. It's divided into 100 centimeters (each about the width of a paper clip), and 1,000 millimeters (each about the width of paper-clip wire). If you travel 1,000 meters you've gone one kilometer, which is a little over half a mile.

Basic Weight

A gram, the basic measure of weight, is about as heavy as a paper clip. Today's one-pound can of coffee will have to be slightly enlarged to weigh in at 500 grams. Because a gram is so light, heavier items like meat will generally be bought by the kilogram (1,000 grams) (a little more than two pounds).

Liquids are measured in liters, which is just a little over a quart. Each liter contains 1,000 milliliters. Cooks will rapidly learn that five milliliters make a teaspoon (or they'll ignore it, and their recipes will still come out right).

Evan Johnston says that many of the metric labels he's seen use abbreviations incorrectly. The proper abbreviations for kilometer, for example, is km, not Km, or K.M. It's also incorrect to write plurals with an "s": two kilometers is simply two km.

There's one other technical battlefront, and that's spelling. Purists say it's "litre" and "metre." But my dictionary spells them liter and meter, and calls the other spelling "chiefly Brit." Not being chiefly Brit., I'll opt for the American version. It's bad enough going metric without having to relearn spelling as well.

Wind-Power Energy
Costs 'Comparable'

A NASA researcher told a gathering of Nebraska utilities officials Thursday that huge, wind-powered generators could produce electricity at an average cost of two or three pennies per kilowatt-hour, comparable with what consumers are now paying.

However, Lincoln Electric System residential customers only are paying an average of 33.4 cents per kWh now. LES officials have pointed out that electric rates in Lincoln are below the national average.

Dr. Joseph Savino of Cleveland, Ohio, a mechanical engineer who has been working on wind power generation since 1972, said the optimum design for such a machine would produce up to 1,500 kilowatts. The machine, he said, would be mounted on a tower about 140-feet tall, and would have two propeller-like blades with a 180-foot diameter.

Savino said such a generator would operate best with a wind speed of 18 miles per hour, but added that other machines are being designed with higher efficiency at lower wind speeds.

Savino said the federal government is taking applications until April 19 from utility companies wanting to join in the construction of an optimum type wind-power generator for use in their networks. To date, no Nebraska companies have applied, Savino said.

NASA now has a smaller experimental wind-powered generator operating in Ohio, with a propeller pattern 125 feet in diameter.

Wind-Power Energy
Costs 'Comparable'

A NASA researcher told a gathering of Nebraska utilities officials Thursday that huge, wind-powered generators could produce electricity at an average cost of two or three pennies per kilowatt-hour, comparable with what consumers are now paying.

However, Lincoln Electric System residential customers only are paying an average of 33.4 cents per kWh now. LES officials have pointed out that electric rates in Lincoln are below the national average.

Dr. Joseph Savino of Cleveland, Ohio, a mechanical engineer who has been working on wind power generation since 1972, said the optimum design for such a machine would produce up to 1,500 kilowatts. The machine, he said, would be mounted on a tower about 140-feet tall, and would have two

Interest-Rate Jitters Beset
Stock MarketNEW YORK (AP) — The stock market developed another case of interest-rate jitters Thursday and prices pulled back in slackened trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which had risen 11.49 over the two previous sessions, dropped 6.14 to 979.85.

The daily count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues showed declines outnumbering advances by close to a 2-1 margin.

Big Board volume came to 20.33 billion shares, down from 26.19 million on Wednesday.

In the equation with which Wall Streeters generally interpret the figures, a sharp rise in the money supply means an increased likelihood that the Fed will tighten its credit policy.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index declined 41 to 100.45, and the NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gave up 21 to 53.70.

Staying Ahead

Metric Harbors For Adults, Very Easy For Children

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

New York — Although we're headed pell-mell for the metric system, the government isn't spending much money to show us how to use it. The Metric Education Program, run by the U.S. Office of Education, has only $2 million this year to teach us all what a dekameter is, and more than 575 groups have applied for grants.

Instead, the job of public education has fallen mainly to business. But who is to teach business? Evan Johnston, head of the Northeast Metric Resource center at the University of Massachusetts (Amherst, Mass. 01002), says that many metric promotions make embarrassing mistakes.

One company brought out a "metric" ruler divided into traditional fractional parts. A Boston restaurant had a "metric lesson" placemat that contained 18 errors. A paper cup manufacturer made a metric cup, then labeled it "five fluid ounces."

Fortunately, such slips don't do much damage because only the metric purists pay any attention. When the rest of us get a metric lesson on our placemats, we hastily cover it with a plate of chopped sirloin and catsup. Johnson agrees that the adults in this country are not looking forward to giving up pounds, feet, inches and quarts. He recently gave a metric lecture to a kindergarten, and found the children enthusiastic, the teachers miserable.

Easy For Children
The children now being born will probably never even learn how many ounces there are in a pound (it is 16) or that in a pint? or both?), so they'll never have to struggle with conversion in their heads. Their instinctive sense of weights and measures will be entirely formed by the metric system. To date, 26 state school boards have formally decided to go metric, and some kind of metric teaching is under way everywhere.

But what of the rest of us, who may not know a pint from an ounce but are sure the inch was made in heaven? Several organizations will provide speakers to explain how easy metrics can be. You can write to Johnston's group at the address given above. Or to the 60-year-old U.S. Metric Assn., Sugarloaf Star Route, Boulder, Colo. (This group also has a free fact sheet, "Metric Units for Everyday Use" — send them a stamped self-addressed envelope.) Yet another source of speakers is the Metric Information Office, Room A166, Technology Building, National Bureau of Standards, Washington D.C. 20234.

You'll learn that gasoline comes in liters. Meat in kilograms. Tea and candy in grams. Milk in liters. Textiles in meters. Driving speed and distances in kilometers. Water freezes at 0 degrees Celsius, boils at 100 degrees. Normal body temperature is 37 degrees.

A meter, the basic unit of length, is a little longer than a yard. It's divided into 100 centimeters (each about the width of a paper clip), and 1,000 millimeters (each about the width of paper-clip wire). If you travel 1,000 meters you've gone one kilometer, which is a little over half a mile.

Basic Weight
A gram, the basic measure of weight, is about as heavy as a paper clip. Today's one-pound can of coffee will have to be slightly enlarged to weigh in at 500 grams. Because a gram is so light, heavier items like meat will generally be bought by the kilogram (1,000 grams) (a little more than two pounds).

Liquids are measured in liters, which is just a little over a quart. Each liter contains 1,000 milliliters. Cooks will rapidly learn that five milliliters make a teaspoon (or they'll ignore it, and their recipes will still come out right).

Evan Johnston says that many of the metric labels he's seen use abbreviations incorrectly. The proper abbreviations for kilometer, for example, is km, not Km, or K.M. It's also incorrect to write plurals with an "s"; two kilometers is simply two km.

There's one other technical battlefield, and that's spelling. Purists say it's "litre" and "metre." But my dictionary spells them liter and meter, and calls the other spelling "chiefly Brit." Not being chiefly Brit, I'll opt for the American version. It's bad enough going metric without having to relearn spelling as well.

Rabbit Meat Plant Up Against Health Rule Snare

Omaha (AP) — A plan to open a rabbit meat processing plant in Omaha has run into a snag.

Dr. A. R. Sofio, a former member of both local and state level health boards, wants to build the plant, and he plans to discuss financing plans with some California interests next week.

However, Sofio, a dentist, has learned that a city ordinance governing the inspection of meat packing plants contains some tough provisions.

Sofio wanted city health department personnel to inspect his plant and animals and to provide him with an inspection stamp for the rabbit meat, which would be sold in stores.

Sofio said federal inspection would be too costly when the plant was just getting started, but that he planned to go to federal inspection after the business got going.

But city ordinances require federal inspection of meats processed for sale in Omaha before the health department can inspect the plant or the meat. There's also another snag — the health department doesn't have any qualified rabbit meat inspectors.

Sofio said he is still hoping to open the plant, and that he is looking for a suitably zoned site.

Some California interests next week.

Smith's Ouster Sought

Omaha (UPI) — A member of Ronald Reagan's Nebraska campaign advisory committee Thursday demanded the immediate resignation of National Republican Chairman Mary Louise Smith.

Former Lt. Gov. John Everroad of Omaha said Mrs. Smith of Des Moines should resign because of her lack of neutrality in the GOP presidential primary.

"The most amazing thing to me is that Mary Louise Smith, national chairman of the Republican Party," Everroad said, "is doing everything possible to re-elect the President of the United States."

Rabbit Meat Plant Up Against Health Rule Snare

Omaha (AP) — A plan to open a rabbit meat processing plant in Omaha has run into a snag.

Some California interests next week.

However, Sofio, a dentist, has learned that a city ordinance governing the inspection of meat packing plants contains some tough provisions.

Sofio wanted city health department personnel to inspect

Ag Council Supporting Vet School

The Nebraska Agricultural Council, an umbrella group of farm organizations, Thursday voted to support "the concept of a five state veterinary college" but tied some strings to their support.

The strings involve full funding and staffing of the new diagnostic laboratory and research facilities for the present Department of Veterinary Science at the University of Nebraska.

The council also wants the diagnostic labs at North Platte and Scottsbluff fully staffed.

The council resolution bluntly suggested that full staffing of the proposed new facility, which would become a part of a five state veterinary science college, would "demonstrate that Nebraska is willing to assume its share of the cost" of the new facility.

In other action, the farm group asked Congress to exempt custom combine operators from Department of Labor regulations governing registration of migrant farm labor.

Council members were generally pleased with the Nebraska Legislature's treatment of agriculture during the present session.

The council has been active in seeking funds for the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at NU. It has also supported funding for the State Department of Agriculture.

PSC Okays Airport Limo Rate Increase

Lincoln's airport limousine service Thursday won emergency approval to increase its downtown rates from $2.50 to $3 and to cut service to residential areas of town.

A unanimous Nebraska Public Service Commission Thursday took the action in light of reports that the limousine service is losing money.

Everett Green, commission executive secretary, said the commission action allows the limousine service to limit its service to the downtown area.

The commission also set a public hearing on Commissioner Eric Rasmussen's proposal to allow all telephone subscribers in the state access to at least 150 other subscribers toll-free. The new rule would affect roughly 19 exchanges, some of which have as few as 80 subscribers on the same exchange.

The hearing will be held 9:30 a.m., April 20 in the commission hearing room.

2 Livestock Auction Firms Pool Services

Rushville (UPI) — Officers of the Alliance Livestock Auction Co. and the Sheridan Livestock Commission Co. in Rushville Thursday announced a merger of the two corporations.

Both markets will continue to operate separately. The merger was made to improve service by combining labor and improving advertising, owners and operators of the markets said in a prepared statement.

The regular Wednesday cattle sale at Alliance will be discontinued, as of the first week in April. Big sales will be conducted at Rushville on Mondays, with cattle sales there on Wednesdays. Cattle sales will be held at Alliance on Fridays.

Heinz Sends Check

Washington (UPI) — Rep John Heinz, R-Pa., sent a personal check for $6,000 to Gulf Oil Corp. in response to Gulf's request for "restitution at the earliest possible date" of illegal corporate campaign contributions allegedly made to Heinz and other politicians.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 4 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 4, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
